Criminal loss

Dear Editor:

A criminal attacks an elderly woman on a public street. He snatches her purse and money, and in wrestling her to the pavement her hip is broken.

If this criminal is apprehended and taken before a court of justice, and if there is sufficient evidence brought against him, he is charged with a crime and sent to prison. When he has served his sentence, according to our criminal system of justice, he has paid his debt to society and is released. Has he, also, paid the elderly woman for her medical expenses, her loss of income and the physical and mental suffering she had to endure?

Our courts for two hundred years have not considered that this elderly woman is entitled to be compensated by her attacker. He "paid his debt to society." Does he not owe equally as much to this woman who has less protection than society has? These are questions our legislative bodies might well consider in the public interest.

In the latter part of the 19th century, Western Pioneers were forced, in the absence of adequate law enforcement, to take the law in their own hands. They formed what later has become known as the "Vigilantes." When a crime was committed and the criminal was apprehended, he was hung.

Again in the latter part of the 20th century, rampant crime is abroad. Law enforcement agencies, and our courts, are failing to meet the challenge of our present day criminals.

The French in an earlier century sent their criminals to an island ten thousand miles away, and deprived them of their citizenship. We must find an "island" somewhere.

Error

Dear Editor:

We all enjoyed the article on the Sunset theatre proposal that appeared in the Pine Cone on April 15th, but there is an error and thought you might need to know.

If a balcony is to get into the plan, it must be decided upon before construction starts as it cannot be added at a later date — as your article states in regard to phase II. So this simply means the number of seats (and parking, if necessary) must all be decided before anything further can happen. Once the City Commissions, Cultural, Planning, et al, have come to a total and final decision as to size, ranging from 732 seats (which is what they have at present and would not require any additional parking) to 1200, which would require a balcony plus parking facilities, we will then go forth for the money.

Coastal plan

Dear Editor:

A campaign has been launched by local developer groups to repeal the Coastal Zone Conservation Act of 1972 (Prop. 20). Their aim is to return entire control of our 1000 mile coastline to local government agencies. They reject the idea of shared responsibility between state and local governments as proposed in the Coastal Plan.

Instead, their petition indicates that city and county governments should have "exclusive authority" to regulate development in their immediate coastal areas. Such authority has already degraded coastal quality and came close to scarring the Monterey Peninsula in 1968. Humble Oil negotiated to build a giant refinery at Moss Landing and a majority of our Monterey County supervisors, holding office at that time, approved the project. Fortunately, concerned citizens realized the dangers of air pollution, oil spills, and visual degradation. Their fight against the refinery forced Humble Oil to abandon the project.

Present county supervisors are certainly more enlightened and hopefully would not make the same mistake. But suppose the residents of Moss Landing should decide to incorporate. Under the initiative to repeal the Coastal Zone Act, the decision to build an oil refinery or a deep-sea tanker port would rest exclusively with a handful of town officials. How long could they hold out against the pressures from a powerful oil company? Are you willing to place the job of coastal protection in the hands of non-resident oil magnates or would you rather work with appointed representatives on a State Coastal Commission?

Sunset gym

Dear Editor:

Thank heaven for the Sunset gym. George Dubetts, a fine instructor, and most of all for the Tuesday and Thursday exercise classes for gals, old and young. I have gone from a size 13 to size 11 in 2 months, no diet.

Once upon a time...

by Frank Lloyd

So many children are herded into the classroom and left there, often it seems for convenience; later shunted into other organized activities, then on to college, to reappear only as a finished product, the college graduate, the young trainee, the apprentice leader of mankind, economic, professional, or religious.

But not me. My first exposure to "education" came from my father who hung a pendulum from an old, now vanished Carmel rafter and gave me pencil and paper and suggested I work out the theory of the pendulum.

He should have had an Archimedes for a son! Or an Einstein!

But maybe they were all late starters like myself.

However that is beside the point. It did no good to suggest that the pendulum swings in a certain manner and that ultimately it of itself ends up swinging not back and forth strictly, but in some sort of a circular manner.

This my father did finally point out, with kindness concealing his frustration in his first-born non-genius. Only recently, as a matter of fact, did the idea enter my mind, like just now, that in the northern hemisphere the pendulum must circle one way, and in opposite manner south of the Equator.

An aside from the wings: How about at the Equator itself? That's how my non-genius mind works. I'm sorry about that, but this mind does keep putting two and two together and then pulling them apart in a subconscious effort to find something more important than that silly old answer, "four."

On this strange old planet Earth, the pendulum must move in many other mysterious ways as influences even beyond our present urge it on, a constant pull between inertia and loss of initial input, air friction, contests between different portions of the string suspending it from the beam. And so forth endlessly.

Other efforts, to educate me in a more formal sense failed for various reasons. Not that I was exactly an idiot, "lacked motivation" as educators might state today; but just because I had a block and succeeded without any effort at succumbing to any and every disease known to childhood the minute I came in contact with any regular schooling.

But I got something much more important from my early Carmel years. Not only was I free — really free — to spend much of my young life outdoors, instead of sitting in seats under fluorescent lights, bathed in carefully warmed air and the classroom's sleep-inducing sounds.

I was taken on walks by my father and frequently with his friends, usually all scientists. I heard their grownup talk far beyond my ears, and my father always carried a little folding magnifying glass.

He was forever examining bugs and plants, the tiny things of life, and showing me. Nothing in nature was lost or went unobserved, and brought forth comment, again frequently beyond my years.

The chaparral was not just a bunch of bushes on a hillside. It was a miniature forest of living manzanita, cascara, sages, lupines, old man weed, toyon, chinquapins.

This chaparral was the forest home of lizards, many snakes, mostly harmless, tiny animals of the day or night, bobcats. There was the spoor to examine and one could see what an owl had eaten the night before and found indigestible and tossed up to save his stomach trouble.

And always as we wandered across the hills and down dry creek beds, there was the wonderful feeling that we belonged in this milieu. We were as much a part as any Indians had been.

The only regret that remains through all the years is that when my father suggested I watch the creek beds for arrow heads, some seemingly more knowledgeable member of the group stated flatly that our local Indians had no arrow heads.

So across the miles I have walked hunting with the old family carbine, and never shooting anything, I never looked for arrowheads. I had to be content with those my father found in his Oregon period in the 1890s.

Too late I learned that arrowheads were much a part of our local Indians and even arrowhead factories existed nearby.

development could spur growth by 25%

Although delays at the county planning commission level will mean the board of supervisors will not consider the Carmel Valley Ranch development plan until after the June 8 elections, Unique Golf Concepts officials will continue with plans to purchase the Holt Ranch when their option matures on June 14.

Unique Golf proposes a 1,055 unit hotel, condominium and estate development with a championship golf course for a 1,700 acre site in Carmel Valley about six miles east of Carmel.

The specific plan on the project, which follows the general plan Del Monte Properties proposed for the land and the board of supervisors adopted in 1966, has been before county agencies in one form or another for almost two years. Major components of the plan include a golf course designed by Pete Dye, clubhouse, 200-unit resort lodge, tennis and pool club, and 855 single family residences, ranging from attached town and patio homes to 150 "estate homes" in the final phase of development.

Through clustering, the developers propose to put about 1,200 acres of palisades and forested hillsides into scenic —Increased water consumption when water conservation is urged to avoid rationing later this year, and when the Public Utilities Commission has placed a ban on further connections to California American Water Company.

—Possible contamination of the Carmel Valley alluvium aquifer, the source of about 6,000 acre feet of water a year for the Monterey Peninsula, by the use of reclaimed wastewater on the golf course, which lies immediately over and upstream from the aquifer.

Unique Golf, however, maintains these concerns are either unfounded or misdirected, and has outlined various mitigation measures which they say would either ameliorate or remove the obstacles opponents see for the development.

In considering the road, Unique Golf has agreed to conditions which would require proportional financial participation in major road improvements undertaken by the county to serve the project. One of the conditions provides that should the company fully finance the improvement and total reconstruction of the intersection of Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads, that cost could be credited to them if four-laning were done at a later date.

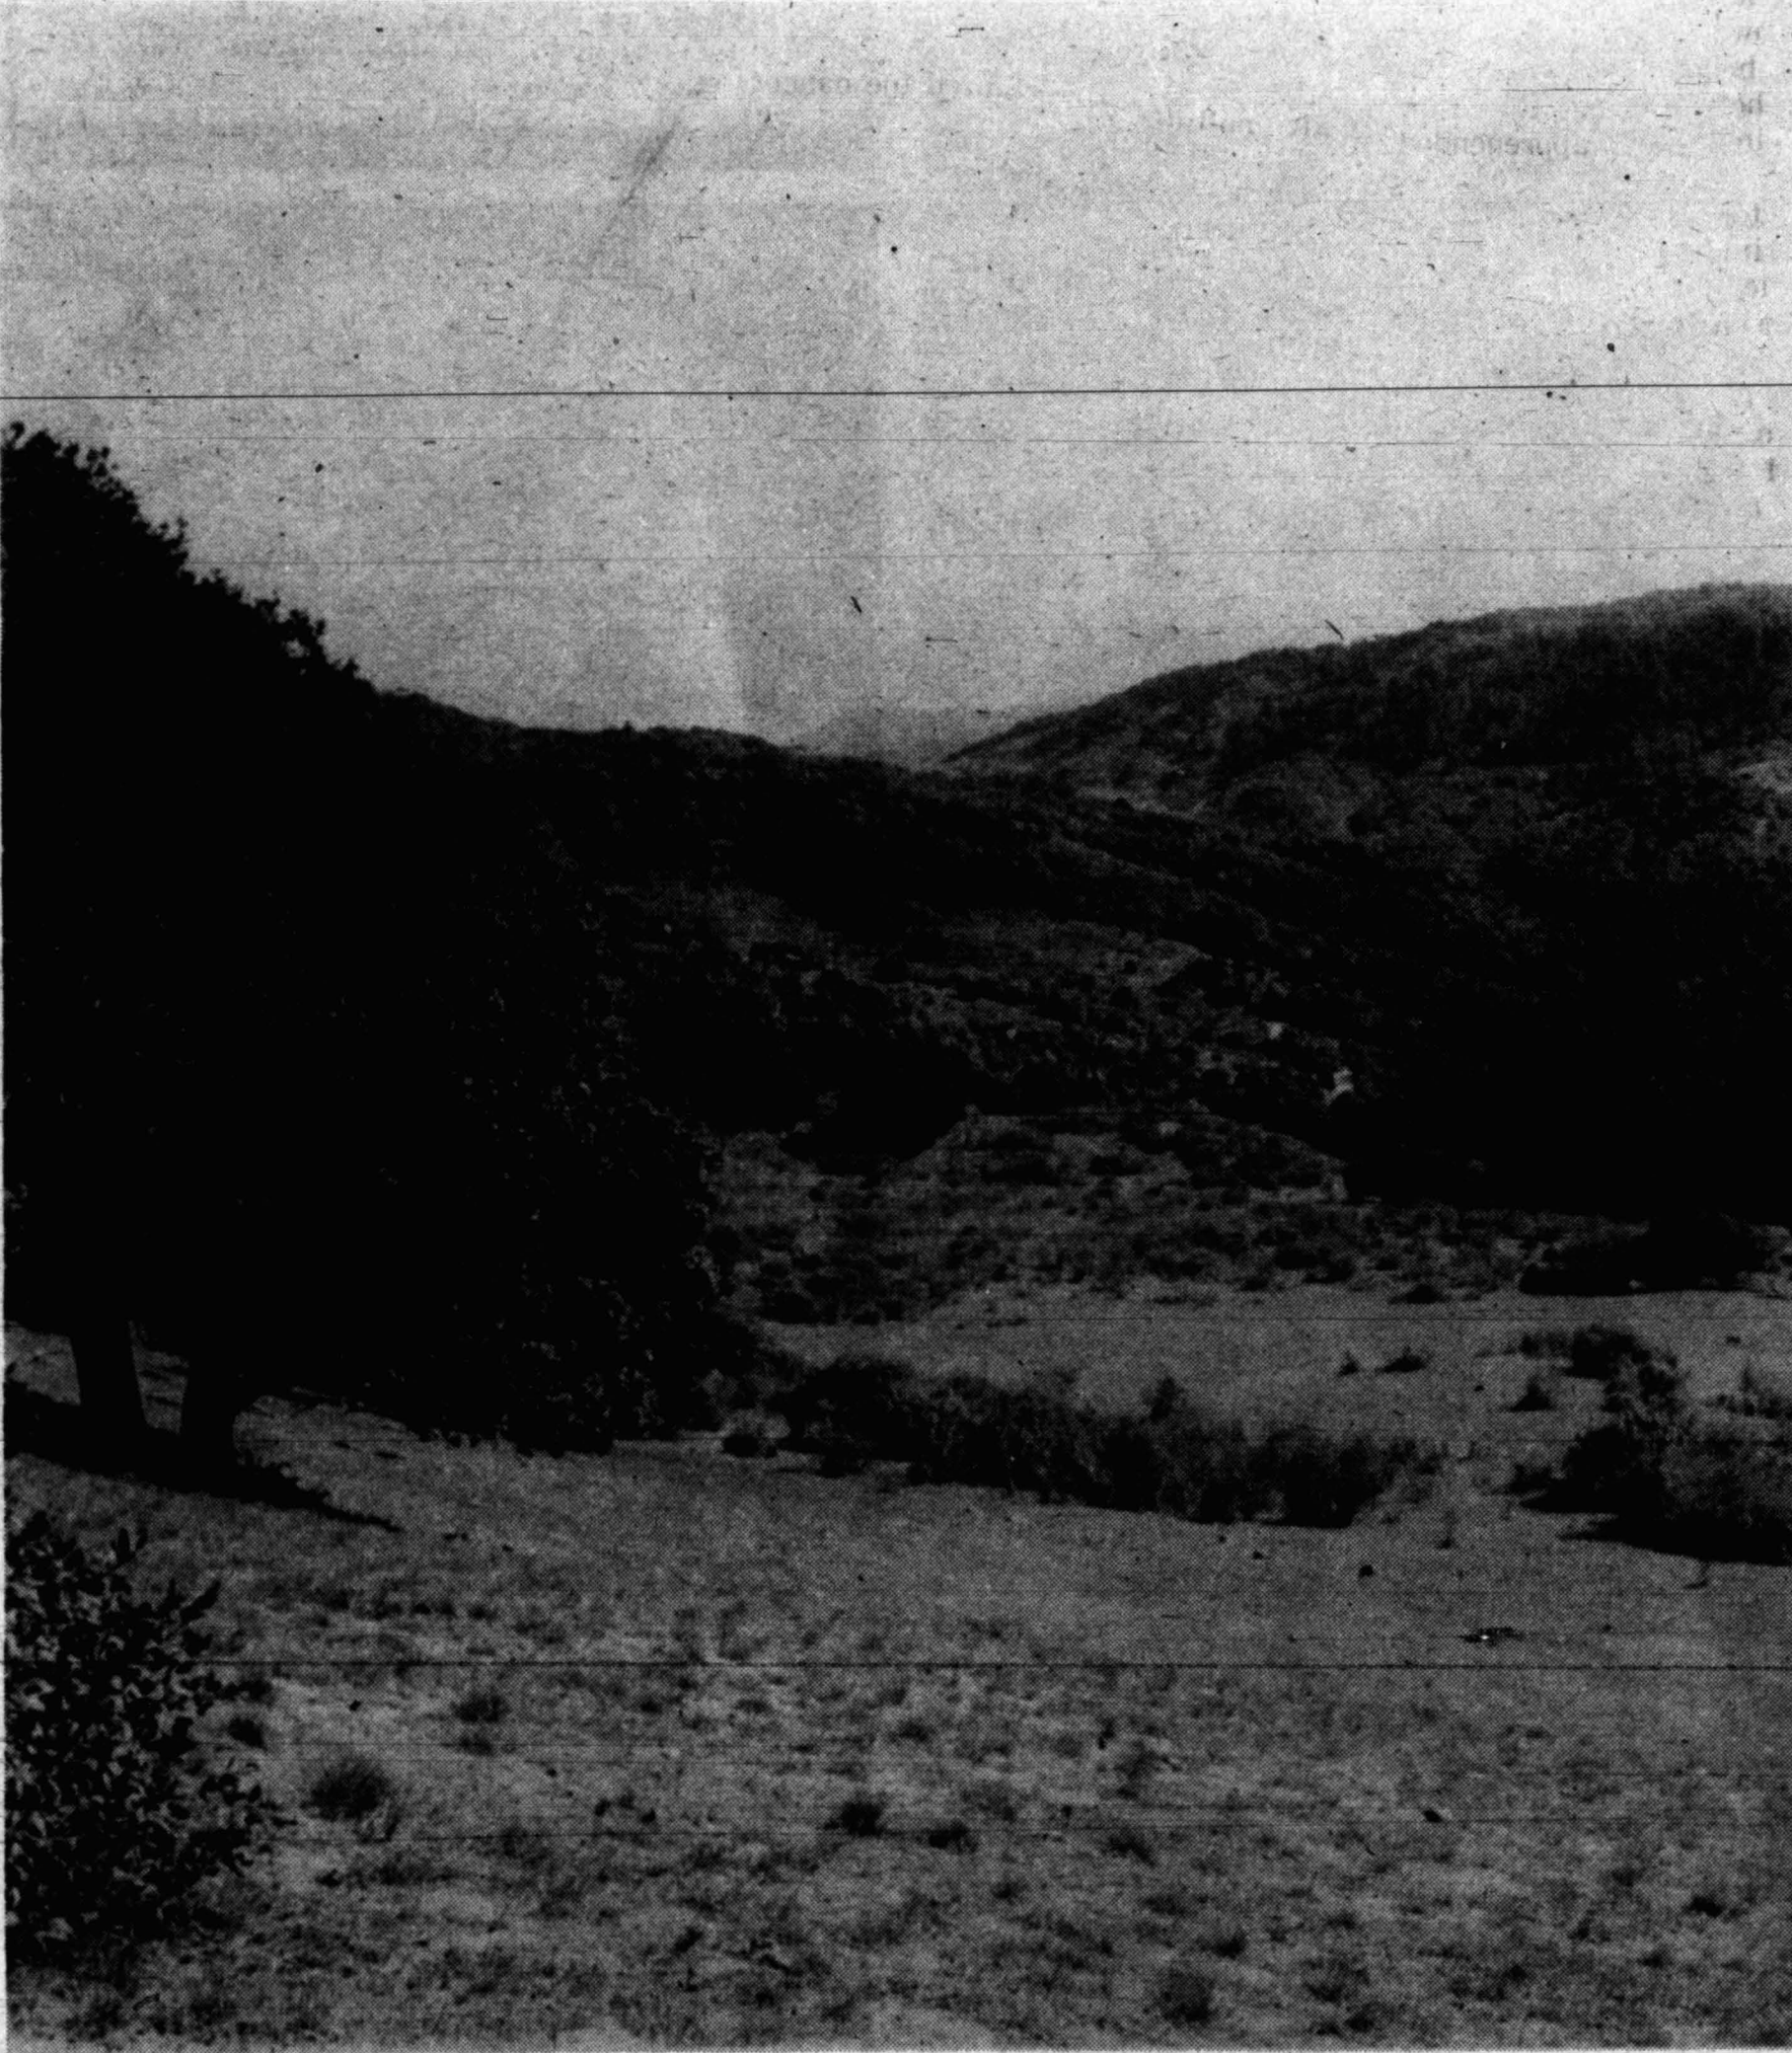

On the more controversial matter of water supply, Unique Golf hired consulting geologist Richard Thorup to explore the possibility of a separate synclinal aquifer in Robinson Canyon which may be capable of serving the subdivision. Thorup's report, released March 1, was sent to the state Department of Water Resources and the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District offices, where engineers for both agencies agreed with his conclusion that such an aquifer did exist.

The officials further agreed that the aquifer was comprised of soils and stone juxtaposed in a manner which would make interchange between the synclinal and Carmel River aquifers "insignificant." In conditions under consideration for the project, officials demand the well be test pumped for quantity and quality of water. Additionally, before any subdivision of the property could be approved, the developers would have to show the effects, if any, on surrounding domestic wells, and demonstrate the mitigation measures they would undertake.

Although the proposed development is within the California American service area, the conditions as they now stand are worded to preclude the developers' hooking up at such time as the ban might be lifted, and would prevent them from drawing from either existing or new wells in the alluvium aquifer to serve the project. Unique Golf officials have expressed doubts about the legality of these conditions in light of water rights, but say they are confident enough in their synclinal aquifer to agree to the conditions at this point.

Even if opponents of the project concede the aquifer, they tend to be most vociferous when discussing the proposed sewage treatment plant. Unique Golf proposes to use its reclaimed wastewater for irrigation of the golf course, which easements and "nature preserves," including dedicating the golf course to permanent open space.

A subsidiary of Landmark Lands, the company's approach is that with their financial capabilities and "track record" with similar developments they can provide a prestigious subdivision in Carmel Valley with the least negative impact on the environment. Unique Golf will open its second course in the Oklahoma City area the first of May, and is preparing to begin construction of a golf course and subdivision in the Palm Springs area.

Local residents, however, have been vehement in environmental impact report hearings and proceedings on the specific plan before the planning commission, questioning if the Valley needs any more development, no matter how prestigious it is. Among their major concerns are:

—Increased traffic on Carmel Valley Road at a time when the county has dropped plans for four-laning the thoroughfare from Via Petra to Robinson Canyon Road. (Some speakers go further and criticize the possibility of four-laning itself, maintaining such roads only encourage increased growth instead of accomodating existing households.)

Valley mouth

Rezoning to be considered

A proposed amendment to the Carmel Valley master plan for property at the mouth of the Valley will likely be the only change in the county master plan ready for consideration at a special planning commission meeting on May 5.

Lack of a certified environmental impact report has knocked the Del Monte Forest 2030 plan off the agenda, and a proposed amendment in the Toro Park area will probably not be ready in time, according to county planning director Ed DeMars.

The amendment affects land generally bounded by Highway 1, Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Middle School and Rancho Canada Golf Club, and the Carmel River. It entails two proposals:

In the Val Verde Drive area, a change in maximum allowable density to four units per acre in a special treatment zone, introducing a new category of medium density residential use.

In three areas where professional office and visitor accommodation uses already occur, a change from planned commercial designation to professional office and visitor accommodation.

To date, more protest has been made about the Val Verde Drive proposal than the second, with citizens' groups maintaining the change will benefit developers with no concern for the general public good.

The proposal would change two existing zonings, one zoned special treatment, six per acre maximum, the other currently zoned one unit per acre. According to the EIR, such a move would allow for residential growth at a density consistent with higher residential densities at the mouth of the Valley while the middle school and golf course areas provide a buffer zone to lower density areas further east.

A 50 lot residential subdivision is already under consideration for the Val Verde Drive location. The Cypress Greens proposal would place 8.9 acres in development with two acres of open space and about 2.3 acres in roads for a net density of 4.59 dwellings per dense commercial to one acre residential... a device promoted by land speculators and others who profit from construction activity."

Instead, the CVPOA says, the county should consider the examples of Great Britain and the Netherlands where agricultural lands are adjacent to dense residential

Little negative comment has been received concerning the rezoning of certain lands to professional office and visitor accommodation. Included in that portion of the amendment are: Lands bounded by Rio Road, Carmel Rancho Boulevard, Highway 1 and the southern boundary of the Carmel Rancho Shopping acre, gross density of 3.79.

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association has opposed both the amendment and the project, citing negative impacts on traffic, the sewer district and water consumption, pointing out the change in zoning would at build-out mean a minimum extra consumption of 33,000 gallons a day.

In a letter to the planning commission, the CVPOA continues, "The proposed amendment makes a fundamental assumption that a zone of moderate density is a desirable planning tool to provide a transition from and industrial uses.

Anne Van Kleeck wrote the commission that the adverse effects of the rezoning far outweighed any mitigating measures, which she called "palliative rather than real." She said the amendment was growth producing in an area already congested. "I don't believe the concept of 'lesser of evils' is politically acceptable," she concluded.

Elliott V. Anderson, president of the Rancho Rio Vista Property Owners Association, echoes the CVPOA in criticizing the amendment as a piecemeal approach and asked for a review of the entire Carmel Valley master plan. Others who criticized either the amendment itself or the approach to amendment included the Carmel Area Coalition.

Mrs. Florence Cadigan, who owns property in the area, supported the amendment in a letter to the commission. She criticized those who opposed the changes, saying, "This utter indifference to the rights and interests of others seems to be a form of arrogance I am unable to tolerate."

Referring to the Coalition letter which spoke of those who live in the area affected, she said, "It is discouraging to be made aware of people who wish to maintain the status quo they created by being 'first on the land'... I submit the coyotes, cows and my ancestors preceded them."

Center, excluding the planned commercial designation at the northeast corner of Highway 1 and Rio Road; land south of Rio Road immediately west of the Carmel Lago subdivision and east of the area shown as planned commercial on the existing plan; land immediately east of Carmel Rancho Boulevard bounded on the north by existing planned commercial uses and on the south by Rio Road.

Among the negative impacts the amendment will have as listed in the EIR:

—An increase of up to 4,773 vehicle movements per day in the lower Carmel Valley

—A five to 10 DBA increase in the ambient noise level, mostly due to automobile traffic.

—An increase of 72 school children, causing more overcrowding at Carmel middle and high schools.

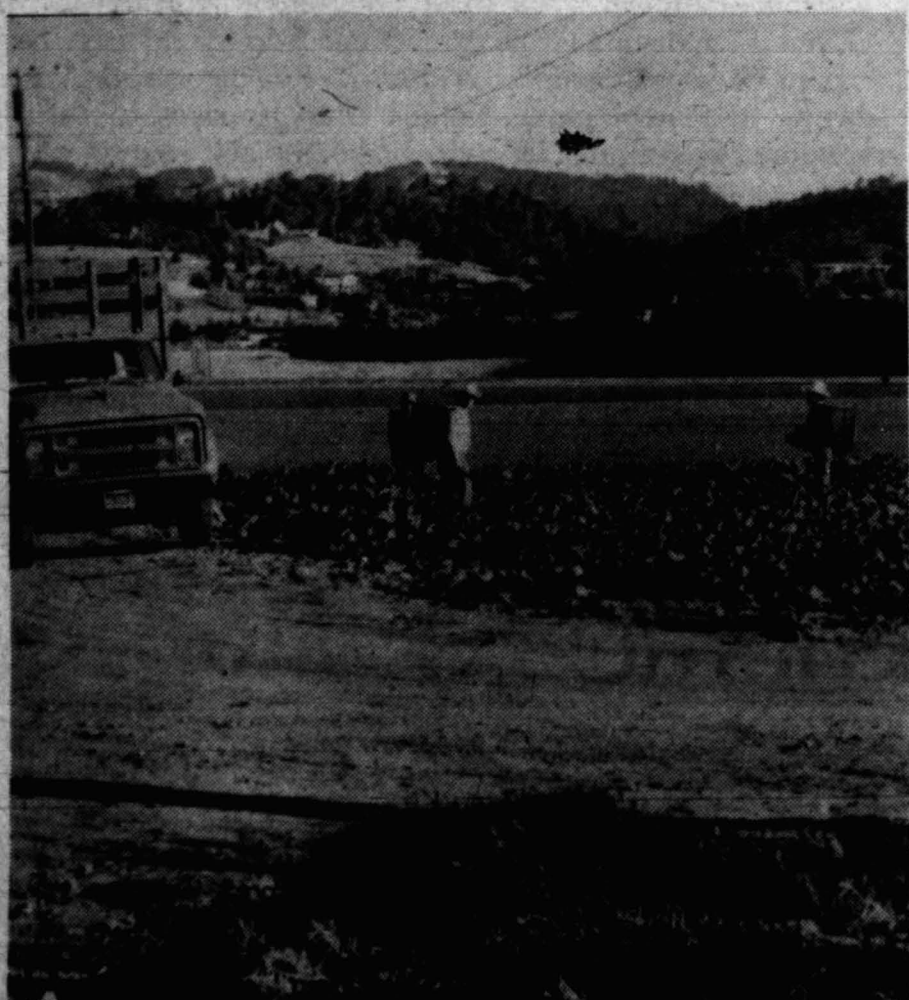

—Water consumption of about 86,878 gallons per day.

—Sewage generation of about 68,889 gallons per day.

—Growth inducing impact of increased residential density.

—Cumulative adverse impacts on traffic, air quality, noise, water supply, sewage treatment and visual resources.

The planning commission will hold a special meeting at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, May 5 in the board of supervisors chambers in Salinas to consider the proposed amendments to the master plan.

BOTH COMMERCIAL and non-commercial property may be rezoned at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Pipeline EDS released

By LESLIE JOHNSON

The environmental data statement on the Canada de la Segunda pipeline and the Begonia iron removal plant speaks in detail to the impacts on area growth caused by the two California American Water Co. projects. The statement was released this week to libraries and government agencies by the PUC. It was prepared by the water company for consideration in EIR procedures.

In addition to listing numerous negative environmental impacts possible during construction, the statement also deals with effects of lowering the water table in the Carmel River aquifer and the possible effects on growth, as well as outlining alternatives to the projects.

In discussing growth impacts, the statement points out the project's growth inducement role can be variously characterized: "Growth inducing," increasing the amount and rate of growth; "growth accomodating," increasing the amount, but not the rate; and "growth accelerating," increasing the amount, but not the rate, but not the amount.

By increasing the effective production and delivery capabilities of the Cal-Am system and increasing system reliability, the report says, the projects would at least temporarily eliminate the conditions which led to the current PUC ban on new water connections.

The report continues, if this effect is assumed, the projects could be called "growth inducing," pointing to 300 pending requests for water service, mostly in Carmel Valley and Del Monte Forest. (Prior to the ban new customers averaged 450 connections a year.)

The statement notes that several major projects pending within the Cal-Am service area have proposed developing their own water supply systems, including the Cypress Greens project, the Meharry Hotel development and the Carmel Valley Ranch.

Although short-term growth may be accelerated, the report continues, longer term growth will be influenced more by market, financial and governmental approval conditions than by availability of water supply.

Full development of the safe yield of the Carmel Valley, then, would appear to meet development needs in the service area to about 2005, the report says, providing the massive Monterey II project develops its own supply. If not, the aquifer should meet the company's service area needs through the mid-1990s.

After reiterating the project objective to fully utilize wells in Seaside and Carmel Valley and existing surface water diversion facilities, the statement lists and discusses four alternatives:

- Changes in design, such as location, timing, phasing, etc.
- Operational alternatives which meet the objective in general, such as conjunctive water use or water conservation.
- Long-term options to meet future water demands, such as new impoundments on the Carmel River.
- No project.

The statement discounts alternative locations for the pipeline, pointing out Cal-Am already owns the right of way and purchasing a new one would result in greater delays and ultimately higher costs to consumer. Additionally, other locations are closer to identified faults or would have major scarring impacts on the hillsides. Additionally, the possibility of paralleling the existing pipelines from the reservoirs are called "costly" and would not have the same reliability of the proposed project, the report says.

There would be "no specific advantage" to locating the iron removal plant at the Berwick or Manor sites, the report continues, and moving the plant to a site outside the 50 or 100 year flood level would require acquisition of new property.

Poor efficiency would result if smaller pipes were used, the report says, and larger pipes could be included, although there would not be any water supplies available beyond the 22,000 acre feet the project is currently designed for.

As to timing, the report points out the construction of the two projects is in direct response to the PUC's decision that Cal-Am had insufficient water treatment and delivery capacity to serve its existing customers. Construction and bid lead-time on the pipeline is one year and three months and for the Begonia plant, one year, with projected completion in January 1978.

Implementing the no project alternative would maintain the existing conditions, the report says. Because Seaside extraction must be halved, an additional 2,000 acre feet a year must be pumped from the Carmel River aquifer. If the proposed projects are not implement, it continues, Cal-Am will "continue to be in a water deficient posture."

The statement considers operational alternatives such as changes in rate structure, water conservation or water rationing. Under long-range options, the report discusses development of additional local water supplies by a new dam or series of dams on the Carmel River, interbasin water transfers with the Castroville, Big and Little Sur and Arroyo Seco areas, reclamation and desalinization, and stabilization of water demands.

Listing unavoidable adverse impacts of the proposed projects, the statement includes short-term effects first, among them: Dust; noise; vehicle emissions; disturbance of vegetation and wildlife habitat; traffic and utility disruption; inconvenience to adjacent residents; visual impacts.

Long-term effects include: Increase in groundwater withdrawals from the Carmel Valley and possible consequent effects on riparian vegetation; commitment to future increases in groundwater withdrawals; loss of vegetation and attendant wildlife; minor traffic and noise impacts; possible facility damage and disruption by seismic hazards; and increased energy and chemical use (in addition to any growth inducing or accomodating effects discussed earlier).

borders the Carmel River, lies directly over the Carmel Valley alluvium aquifer and is upstream from the Begonia wells of California American.

Opponents argue that package sewage treatment plants have a state-wide history of poor operation and that the state of the art in water reclamation is not advanced enough to guarantee there would be no chance of contamination of the domestic water supply.

Regional engineers for the Water Quality Control Board, however, have said in proceedings that it is not generally the plants themselves which perform poorly, but that some developers install them and then do not maintain them.

In addition to agreeing to more stringent controls on when they will be allowed to spray the golf course (Current state standards forbid spraying of reclaimed wastewater if the wind is greater than 10 miles per hour — Unique Golf has agreed to no spraying if the wind is blowing more than four miles an hour), the developers have concurred with a condition requiring them to hire a state licensed operator to maintain the plant and make necessary tests, as well as the formation of a county service area to accrue tax revenues for the system in the event the developers do not properly maintain the system.

Opponents also question the adequacy of the proposed emergency storage, which developers say they have designed to hold up 20 days of treated effluent in the event wet weather prohibits spraying on the golf course. Critics of the proposed system also say the emergency underground run-off system would increase the risk of contaminating the domestic water supply.

After extensive hearings on the environmental impact report, the planning commission took the matter up first on Dec. 17. That meeting was continued until further information on the synclinal aquifer was received, and an interim report by Thorup led to another continuance.

After a fourth meeting, chairman pro tempore Marit Evans closed the hearing from the public and sent the specific plan to a subcommittee, which two weeks ago recommended the commission take a favorable position on the plan and voluminous conditions. Commissioner Eleanor Taylor filed a minority report, saying she could not approve any plans of such magnitude until the county adopted a growth policy for all unincorporated areas.

Developers found themselves faced with another continuance, this time to May 12, when commissioner Leon Stutzman indicated he wanted more time to consider the various conditions. It may have been a saving move for Unique Golf, however.

Chairman Edward Whitaker has consistently disqualified himself from any participation in consideration of the plan because of a possible conflict of interest. Whitaker is a realtor who shares an office with Nick Marotta, who handled the transfer from Del Monte to Unique Golf.

The last meeting found commissioners Charmaine Cruchette and Peter Cailotto absent, which left only six voting members. Because approval of specific plans requires five affirmative votes, a majority of the commission rather than a majority of a quorum, Unique Golf may gain a more favorable vote later, and company officials admit that full attendance at least betters the odds.

Regardless of the planning commission's recommendation, both opponents and proponents are likely to find themselves in extended consideration before the board of supervisors. And scheduling is such that if the commission makes a recommendation May 12, requirements for publication of legal notices would preclude board consideration until after the June 8 election, when Fifth District Supervisor Sam Farr faces Willard Fonda.

In addition to expressing dismay that his project may have become something of a proverbial political football, Unique Golf Concepts president Ernie Vossler has said that if the board of supervisors does not approve the specific plan, the company will resort to the courts.

Meanwhile, the company will purchase the ranch, somewhat with the attitude that the land will become even more valuable with time and that other options as far as land use planning and subdivision, such as 40 acre "farms" or a grid subdivision on suitable land with one acre minimum lots, can still be explored.

Specific plan

Included in the specific plan for the Carmel Valley Ranch are:

290 patio homes and 365 attached houses on a condominium concept, with an average sale price of $60,000 to $80,000.

100 single family lots for custom construction under design control by individual owners.

100 single family estates of at least 2.5 acres beyond the ridge, where homes averaging about $150,000 in value would be built by individual owners under design control.

200 unit resort lodge complex, including sportswear boutiques, restaurant and any real estate sales office.

Golf clubhouse, to be constructed in first phase of development with golf course and to include a bar and grill.

149.5 acres in an 18-hole championship golf course designed by Pete Dye.

10 acre tennis club with swimming pools, to be located beyond the ridge and visible only from Robinson Canyon Road and Rancho San Carlos.

1,090 acres in natural reserve, including redwood and cactus stands in Snively's Gulch.

The project will be served by a private road system, including a security gate. Developers propose water service by a mutual water company and sewage treatment by a package plant with use of reclaimed wastewater on the golf course.

Lester Rowntree

An independent woman devoted to plants

Lester Rowntree has one regret in life, and that is due to a coyote in the Mojave desert.

Once, while returning from a seed collecting trip, she stopped in the Mojave just about dusk. When she noticed a lone coyote walking along the wash, she decided it would be a good time to test her theory of communicating with the animals on a mental and spiritual level. It is her feeling that an animal can sense a person's thoughts.

"So," she said, "I decided, I'm going to make him turn and walk toward me. Which I did. But then I wavered. I didn't carry it far enough. I was a fool. I've cursed myself ever since. I thought, 'Now, when he gets to me, shall I pet him or not?' But you see of course, I broke it. That if-ing. He just stopped, looked right back, shrugged his shoulders and left. I've regretted it ever since."

This special feeling for animals was developed by Lester as she worked with plants, a career she began at the age of 50, soon after her marriage ended in divorce.

"You know I liked marriage. And I liked my husband. But I got tired of being owned. And you're mine, mine, mine. You can't do this and you can't do that. I wanted to be myself. To do what I wanted. We eventually became friends; but, he could never understand why I did it," said Lester.

But divorce, and her son being grown, gave Lester the opportunity she seemed to be waiting for in her life. A chance to be "free as a bird."

As a child in England, she admired the gypsies. When her family moved to the United States, she gave this admiration to the Indians, who seemed to be free spirits to her. (Though she admits she never found any Indians here.)

It was this free-feeling spirit that took her into the back country of California for six months at a time. There, she lived on a diet of carrots and chocolate as she cataloged wildflowers, collected samples of the plants and their seeds. Her work in this field has placed her among the leading botanists in the world.

At 97, she no longer even gardens. "Age and eyesight keep me from working with the earth," Lester said as she sat, looking down to the sea over the garden and trees she planted years ago at her Carmel Highlands home.

Trees of Monterey pine and Gowen cypress mingle with the coastal shrubs and chunks of granite in the hillside garden. A flagstone step, built for Lester as a surprise by her grandson, lets one know it is a garden rather than just free land.

Lester was very reluctant to talk about her career. "I was only doing what I was happy doing. Doing my own thing, as they say now," she said, inferring that it was nothing special.

There are few plant people (as Lester calls them) who would agree with Lester Rowntree's evaluation of her own work.

From her interest in California native plants, the California Native Plant Society was formed. She still serves as its honorary president. In 1971 the American Horticultural Society presented her an award for her work in the conservation and propagation of California flora. Then in 1974, the California Horticultural Society honored her with its

a whimsical bestiary (in ceramic) by

LOET VANDERVEEN

Our haughty llama and imperturbable pelican belong to a menagerie of ceramic creatures that includes whale, horse, raccoon and other charmers to romp across your lawn or stand guard at your door or hearth.

A resident of the Big Sur for the last 15 years, Mr. Vanderveen was born in Holland and served in the RAF during World War II. He started his creative career as a fashion designer in Zurich, London and New York. He studied with Fong Chow, artist and curator of the Far Eastern Department of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and became knowledgeable in ceramics and glaze chemistry.

Loet Vanderveen has the gift of seeing things more sharply than most of us. Translated into art, this talent permits him to strip away much of the protective covering living creatures assume and capture their innate qualities.

Long known for his delightful poses of all manner of homo sapiens in ceramic and bronze, Vanderveen has most recently turned his attention to the animal kingdom.

Del Monte 2030 plan EIR hearing delayed

With Forest property owners working closely with Del Monte Properties management on changes in the 2030 plan for that area, the board of supervisors has continued consideration of certification of the environmental impact report on the proposed plan until June 22, at the latest.

Planning staff members were instructed last week to rewrite and clarify the EIR in relation to proposed additional alternatives to the original plan of Del Monte, which included, 5,594 total units.

The plan, an amendment to the county master plan, allocates the total build-out of the Forest, anticipated to take to the year 2030, hence its title. Forest home owners, however, have maintained the build-out would be too great even in the year 2030, and have sought a lower total density and greater open space.

Del Monte Properties did not favor the continuance, because lack of a certified EIR knocks them off the planning commission agenda for its May 5 meeting to consider amendments to the county master plan.

Although adopted county policy is that amendments to the master plan will be considered only twice a year, director of planning Ed DeMars said Wednesday he believed the board of supervisors intended to hold a special meeting for consideration of the 2030 plan, departing from policy.

Although Del Monte Properties developed the original proposal, it will be a joint venture from this point, following an agreement between the Del Monte Forest Home Owners Association and the company on March 29.

The company has agreed to negotiate with the homeowners to reduce the total number of units by about 25 percent from the original proposal. There are currently 2,778 existing units, with 1,720 additional units proposed in the agreement for a total of 4,498 in 2030. None of the figures includes hotel rooms.

Del Monte Properties argued Tuesday that because the EIR dealt with circumstances more severe than what the agreement allows it was sufficient to meet the requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act.

Referring to the agreement, the company also pointed out the time factors involved. Because the agreement of the homeowners and the company calls for a one year term for adoption of a plan acceptable to both parties by the coastal commission and the county, Sterling

Atkinson, land development manager, said it was unlikely that deadline could be met if the matter were not heard on May 5.

Atkinson noted in a letter that, in light of the nine months it has taken to reach the first hearing on the general plan amendment, it would be "unlikely" a new EIR and proposed plan could be processed through the two agencies before the agreement lapsed.

Planners revise ordinance

The Carmel Planning Commission spent almost all of its first regular monthly meeting on a revised city sign ordinance, although the new regulations will contain few substantive changes.

During well over two hours of discussion, the commission made decisions on the following main points:

—All signs will still be presented to the Design Review Committee of the commission.

—Contractor signs at a work site will not exceed an aggregate of 10 square feet.

—Property owners in the commercial district will be responsible for removing the signs of defunct businesses within 10 days, if the departing business itself does not do the job.

—A special regulation forbidding moving window displays in the commercial district will not be added at this time.

—The building inspector may give a temporary okay for business signs, but that okay does not obligate the commission in any way to accept that sign.

The commission, acting as the board of adjustments, approved the purchase of three in-lieu parking spaces by Gunnar and Niels Reimers for their proposed new building on San Carlos Street, near 8th. Also approved was a use permit to allow Sidney C. Little a bar sink in his incompleting house on the corner of Casanova and Palou.

Approved by the commission were the storefront design for Somsong's Thai Silk on Ocean Avenue, Forest Theater design of the lighting towers, and the display case design for Gifts from Bacchus on 6th Street.

Possible routes for a Carmel mini-bus service were referred to the Ad Hoc Circulation Element Committee.

Lester Rowntree...

annual award for outstanding contributions to horticulture. She also serves as president-at-large of the American Herb Society and is the honorary secretary of the British Alpine Garden Society.

She had her first garden at the age of two. It was a section in the family garden plot in England. Both her parents were plant people, she said, although neither worked in the professional plant world. "Father was a tea merchant, and mother directed the estate. We children rarely saw them. For we usually were with the governess." But the family gathered in the garden, and her father's aviary, (he was a bird fancier, she said) which were the Lester children's favorite places.

"Next to mountains, I love England. And if my family weren't here, I would return there now," she said. "But I guess if I worship anything, it's nature and her mountains. I could never spend enough time in the mountains," Lester reminisced, adding, "It's the Tetons that I love the most."

Her wildflower collecting expeditions took her all over the United States. There isn't a mountain range in the United States that she has not collected.

"People would ask me if I was afraid," she said. Her voice seemed to grow stronger when she added, "I've never been afraid in my life. I don't see any good in it. Fear attracts the thing you're afraid of."

For 26 years Lester worked alone in the mountains. Alone except for a mule named Skippy, who helped carry her presses and other gear. "I took a tent," she says, "but that was for my notes and equipment. I slept under the stars."

From this 26 years of collecting came reams of field notes, many photographs and even a seed business. "In my collecting, I placed nature first," cautioned Lester. "I would never interfere with her balance. I made sure there was enough seed for the birds and propagation. Then it was my turn."

The notes eventually made their way into the lectures that Lester gave in order to support her collecting. And later into books. Her book "The Hardy Californians" is considered one of the best books on California flora.

It describes California as 158,297 square miles with "areas thousands of feet high, land that is standing on edge and land as flat as a dance floor". She says this gives California its wide diversity of climate. And that this climate and terrain diversity combined with her passion for observing plants in their natural state, is what gave her the drive and inspiration for her collecting.

She said with good field notes, a book will write itself. This seems to be true for her. The years that Lester followed the cycles of the flowers are recorded in the chapter headings of "Hardy Californians." She begins at the "top of the world" high on the mountain slopes of California and walks down into the grassy alpine meadows, listing the plant life as she comes down. The final chapter gives the gardener hints on how to make a home for the wild flora in a home (or tame) garden.

"When I was collecting, it was the time of garden magazines," she said. "When I was free — which was when I ran out of food up in the mountains, I would offer to do a talk," Lester said, adding that finding an audience at that time was easy.

But these talks were often a disappointment to her. She said, "People didn't want to know about my work. When the question and answer sessions came, they always asked; 'Did you see a rattlesnake? Were you ever frightened by a bear? Were you ever hungry?' I found this very unrewarding. It had nothing to do with plants."

Fortunately, her lecture notes made their way into her books. For in 1949, all her field notes, her seed business and many of her specimens were destroyed by fire. Without her notes, she did not attempt to write anymore. The other books that she had planned were lost.

Another unfortunate accident on a 1955 field trip nearly robbed her of her sight. While walking through the hills in San Bernardino, a sharp stick hit her in the face. She spent several weeks in the hospital, but her eyesight was never completely recovered. She was able to see; but the strain would cause headaches that prevented her from doing much reading or intricate work.

Lester attributes her independent nature and her need for aloneness to her family. "When you are one of eight, you want time alone. It's something you don't get very often in a big family," she said.

She feels her independent nature came not only from her Quaker background but from her attendance at boarding school.

"Father sent us to boarding school because we were losing our proper English," she remembered. She recalled coming home and practicing using he ain't and she ain't. She said, "When Father heard this, we were off to boarding school in the east."

"Oh, was I homesick," Lester recalled. "But homesickness is a good thing. It isn't pretty being

Brussel calls Hughes' death hoax

By DAVID COLE

Mae Brussell compares the arrival of Howard Hughes' dead body in Texas to the discovery of a third rate burglary at the Watergate Hotel in 1972.

During the April 20th speech at Sunset Center, conspiracy researcher Brussell called the Hughes affair "Watergate II" and predicted that revelations about the inter-relationships between the Hughes empire and the United States government will be coming out for the next 10 years.

One of the most important things to arise, Brussell predicts, will be the fact that Howard Hughes has not been the power behind the Hughes corporations for many years. In fact, Brussell claims, Hughes has been dead since 1971.

The body recently flown into this country from Mexico was actually the body of Brooks Randall, Brussell feels, and not Howard Hughes. Randall, Brussell wrote in a 1974 magazine article, was hired to act as Hughes' double several years ago.

Brussell is a Carmel Valley resident who became interested in the contradictory evidence presented in the Warren Report on the Assassination of John F. Kennedy back in 1963. During her own private investigation of that, and later assassinations, Brussell began to uncover what she calls a world-wide conspiracy which is trying to control our government through the use of murder, money and political manipulations.

Although Brussell's efforts have spanned 12 years, she admits she only recently became a "Hughes watcher." But, as more and more connections appeared between Hughes companies, the CIA, and the men involved in Watergate, Brussell became more interested.

"You have all the mechanisms for controlling Planet Earth in the Hughes Empire," Brussell says.

And Brussell thinks that's exactly what's happening.

Brussell sees Hughes' tentacles everywhere. Hughes Aircraft has received nearly $6 billion in government contracts over the past 10 years. Hughes has large interests in Las Vegas and the Bahamas. He has his fingers in television, engineering and mining. The Howard Hughes Medical Institute has dispensed millions of dollars in research grants.

More importantly, Brussell says, Hughes money has been traced to many politicians — in 1970 Hughes reportedly sent Richard Nixon $100,000 in $100-dollar bills. The Hughes companies have also been linked extensively with the CIA, and to Watergate figures.

Hughes has tremendous power, Brussell says, but he can't be investigated because his companies are international and Hughes himself was seldom in this country. That, Brussell says, makes Hughes companies a natural tool for CIA and other clandestine operations.

"Hughes companies are a front for everything that's been making our headlines," Brussell says, and she feels that more and more will come out about this as time goes on.

But Howard Hughes himself was expendable, Brussell asserts, and she believes he finally died in 1971 and was buried at sea off the Mediterranean island owned by Aristotle Onassis. A double then took his place.

Actually, Hughes has not had a hand in the operation of his companies much further back than 1971, Brussell relates. He was declared mentally incompetent by a doctor in 1957, she says, and was not seen by any member of the public after that date.

The Clifford Irving hoax about a Hughes book was done on purpose, Brussell contends, in order to provide an excuse for bringing Hughes out publicly. But Irving was paid off, and the Hughes phone call to the press was a fake.

Brussell backs up her claims by pointing to the conflicting stories about the cause of Hughes' recent death. She also says that none of Hughes' fingerprints were found in his Mexican hotel room and that many papers had been shredded to dispose of incriminating evidence.

Brussell does not believe the report that the dead man in Texas had Hughes' fingerprints. She even questions the autopsy report, saying that "Hughes" apparently shrunk three inches, according to it.

Brussell says that someone apparently wanted to put an end to the Hughes story, and that is the reason Hughes' fake body suddenly appeared in Houston. But she hopes that the incident will start a new wave of Watergate-type investigations.

Big Sur Town Hall meeting set May 3

The Citizens Advisory Committee for the Big Sur Area Study will hold a "town hall" meeting May 3 in the Grange Hall in Big Sur in order to obtain public input for the project.

Regular meetings of the committee, which began April 5, are held every Monday in the Grange Hall at 7:30 p.m. and are expected to continue until a revision to the Monterey County Coast Master Plan is completed.

The town hall meetings will essentially be loosely structured so that people will feel free to contribute their own ideas about the coast.

In recent meetings, members of the committee discussed what they feel are the chief areas of conflict between coastal plan policies and the Monterey County Coast Master Plan. They include:

- protection of public areas.
- Highway 1 capacity and water supply as important planning constraints.
- possible designation of Highway 1 as a parkway, possibly with fees for use and informational centers.

— alternatives to outright public purchase of lands and the problems of public access across private lands.

— the difficulty of creating bike and hiking trails along the Big Sur coastline.

Lester Rowntree...

annual award for outstanding contributions to horticulture. She also serves as president-at-large of the American Herb Society and is the honorary secretary of the British Alpine Garden Society.

She had her first garden at the age of two. It was a section in the family garden plot in England. Both her parents were plant people, she said, although neither worked in the professional plant world. "Father was a tea merchant, and mother directed the estate. We children rarely saw them. For we usually were with the governess." But the family gathered in the garden, and her father's aviary, (he was a bird fancier, she said) which were the Lester children's favorite places.

"Next to mountains, I love England. And if my family weren't here, I would return there now," she said. "But I guess if I worship anything, it's nature and her mountains. I could never spend enough time in the mountains," Lester reminisced, adding, "It's the Tetons that I love the most."

Her wildflower collecting expeditions took her all over the United States. There isn't a mountain range in the United States that she has not collected.

"People would ask me if I was afraid," she said. Her voice seemed to grow stronger when she added, "I've never been afraid in my life. I don't see any good in it. Fear attracts the thing you're afraid of."

For 26 years Lester worked alone in the mountains. Alone except for a mule named Skimpy, who helped carry her presses and other gear. "I took a tent," she says, "but that was for my notes and equipment. I slept under the stars."

From this 26 years of collecting came reams of field notes, many photographs and even a seed business. "In my collecting, I placed nature first," cautioned Lester. "I would never interfere with her balance. I made sure there was enough seed for the birds and propagation. Then it was my turn."

The notes eventually made their way into the lectures that Lester gave in order to support her collecting. And later into books. Her book "The Hardy Californians" is considered one of the best books on California flora.

It describes California as 158,297 square miles with "areas thousands of feet high, land that is standing on edge and land as flat as a dance floor". She says this gives California its wide diversity of climate. And that this climate and terrain diversity combined with her passion for observing plants in their natural state, is what gave her the drive and inspiration for her collecting.

She said with good field notes, a book will write itself. This seems to be true for her. The years that Lester followed the cycles of the flowers are recorded in the chapter headings of "Hardy Californians." She begins at the "top of the world" high on the mountain slopes of California and walks down into the grassy alpine meadows, listing the plant life as she comes down. The final chapter gives the gardener hints on how to make a home for the wild flora in a home (or tame) garden.

"When I was collecting, it was the time of garden magazines," she said. "When I was free — which was when I ran out of food up in the mountains, I would offer to do a talk," Lester said, adding that finding an audience at that time was easy.

But these talks were often a disappointment to her. She said, "People didn't want to know about my work. When the question and answer sessions came, they always asked; 'Did you see a rattlesnake? Were you ever frightened by a bear? Were you ever hungry?' I found this very unrewarding. It had nothing to do with plants."

Fortunately, her lecture notes made their way into her books. For in 1949, all her field notes, her seed business and many of her specimens were destroyed by fire. Without her notes, she did not attempt to write anymore. The other books that she had planned were lost.

Another unfortunate accident on a 1955 field trip nearly robbed her of her sight. While walking through the hills in San Bernardino, a sharp stick hit her in the face. She spent several weeks in the hospital, but her eyesight was never completely recovered. She was able to see; but the strain would cause headaches that prevented her from doing much reading or intricate work.

Lester attributes her independent nature and her need for aloneness to her family. "When you are one of eight, you want time alone. It's something you don't get very often in a big family," she said.

She feels her independent nature came not only from her Quaker background but from her attendance at boarding school.

"Father sent us to boarding school because we were losing our proper English," she remembered. She recalled coming home and practicing using he ain't and she ain't. She said, "When Father heard this, we were off to boarding school in the east."

"Oh, was I homesick," Lester recalled. "But homesickness is a good thing. It isn't pretty being

Brussel calls Hughes' death hoax

By DAVID COLE

Mae Brussell compares the arrival of Howard Hughes' dead body in Texas to the discovery of a third rate burglary at the Watergate Hotel in 1972.

During the April 20th speech at Sunset Center, conspiracy researcher Brussell called the Hughes affair "Watergate II" and predicted that revelations about the inter-relationships between the Hughes empire and the United States government will be coming out for the next 10 years.

One of the most important things to arise, Brussell predicts, will be the fact that Howard Hughes has not been the power behind the Hughes corporations for many years. In fact, Brussell claims, Hughes has been dead since 1971.

The body recently flown into this country from Mexico was actually the body of Brooks Randall, Brussell feels, and not Howard Hughes. Randall, Brussell wrote in a 1974 magazine article, was hired to act as Hughes' double several years ago.

Brussell is a Carmel Valley resident who became interested in the contradictory evidence presented in the Warren Report on the Assassination of John F. Kennedy back in 1963. During her own private investigation of that, and later assassinations, Brussell began to uncover what she calls a world-wide conspiracy which is trying to control our government through the use of murder, money and political manipulations.

Although Brussell's efforts have spanned 12 years, she admits she only recently became a "Hughes watcher." But, as more and more connections appeared between Hughes companies, the CIA, and the men involved in Watergate, Brussell became more interested.

"You have all the mechanisms for controlling Planet Earth in the Hughes Empire," Brussell says.

And Brussell thinks that's exactly what's happening.

Brussell sees Hughes' tentacles everywhere. Hughes Aircraft has received nearly $6 billion in government contracts over the past 10 years. Hughes has large interests in Las Vegas and the Bahamas. He has his fingers in television, engineering and mining. The Howard Hughes Medical Institute has dispensed millions of dollars in research grants.

More importantly, Brussell says, Hughes money has been traced to many politicians — in 1970 Hughes reportedly sent Richard Nixon $100,000 in $100-dollar bills. The Hughes companies have also been linked extensively with the CIA, and to Watergate figures.

Hughes has tremendous power, Brussell says, but he can't be investigated because his companies are international and Hughes himself was seldom in this country. That, Brussell says, makes Hughes companies a natural tool for CIA and other clandestine operations.

"Hughes companies are a front for everything that's been making our headlines," Brussell says, and she feels that more and more will come out about this as time goes on.

But Howard Hughes himself was expendable, Brussell asserts, and she believes he finally died in 1971 and was buried at sea off the Mediterranean island owned by Aristotle Onassis. A double then took his place.

Actually, Hughes has not had a hand in the operation of his companies much further back than 1971, Brussell relates. He was declared mentally incompetent by a doctor in 1957, she says, and was not seen by any member of the public after that date.

The Clifford Irving hoax about a Hughes book was done on purpose, Brussell contends, in order to provide an excuse for bringing Hughes out publicly. But Irving was paid off, and the Hughes phone call to the press was a fake.

Brussell backs up her claims by pointing to the conflicting stories about the cause of Hughes' recent death. She also says that none of Hughes' fingerprints were found in his Mexican hotel room and that many papers had been shredded to dispose of incriminating evidence.

Brussell does not believe the report that the dead man in Texas had Hughes' fingerprints. She even questions the autopsy report, saying that "Hughes" apparently shrunk three inches, according to it.

Brussell says that someone apparently wanted to put an end to the Hughes story, and that is the reason Hughes' fake body suddenly appeared in Houston. But she hopes that the incident will start a new wave of Watergate-type investigations.

Big Sur Town Hall meeting set May 3

The Citizens Advisory Committee for the Big Sur Area Study will hold a "town hall" meeting May 3 in the Grange Hall in Big Sur in order to obtain public input for the project.

Regular meetings of the committee, which began April 5, are held every Monday in the Grange Hall at 7:30 p.m. and are expected to continue until a revision to the Monterey County Coast Master Plan is completed.

The town hall meetings will essentially be loosely structured so that people will feel free to contribute their own ideas about the coast.

MPC registration due

Registration for the fall semester at Monterey Peninsula College will begin Monday May 3. A list of classes being offered in the fall is now available at the college.

To avoid long registration lines, students are being given the option of making appointments for registration or utilizing a special "walk-in" registration period.

registrar Sally Jones said. Fall semester students may use the walk-in procedure Aug. 2-13.

Registration appointments began being scheduled April 19 and are continuing according to an alphabetical schedule. On Mondays, students whose last name starts with the letter, D, E, F, G or H can go to the admissions office to make an appointment to register; on Tuesdays, students whose last names start with N, O, P, Q or R can make appointments; on Wednesdays, the letters are S, T, U, V, W, X, Y and Z; on Thursdays, the letters are I, J, K, L and M and on Fridays the letters are A, B and C.

The procedure applies for both the summer and fall sessions and students may make an appointment for both sessions at the same time, Mrs. Jones said.

Registration fees for fall classes include a $5 college center fee and a $5 health fee for day students and $2 for evening students. Non-residents will be charged an additional tuition fee of $32 per unit.

More information may be obtained by calling 649-1150, exts. 210, 211 and 371.

Too many crooks spoil the plot

By LESLIE JOHNSON

If too many cooks spoil the broth, perhaps too many crooks spoil the plot. Such seems to be the case with Marcia Gambrell Hovick's "The Clackett House," which opened this past weekend at the Forest Theatre-in-the-Ground.

A mystery which juxtaposes ancient Egypt with modern day urban renewal, "The Clackett House" seems peopled with every conceivable clichéd character.

The problem of introducing them all and revealing their relationships slows the pace, and we are confronted with accents and mannerisms that are in between parody and poorly-done melodrama.

There is Renata Pidgeon, a young college student who is holding off on "doing" the Navajos until she finds out about her work study grant. Having her around makes for the necessary romantic interest when aspiring young journalist Colin Bradford appears.

There is Georgiana Clackett, keeper of an architectural monstrosity crammed full of Egyptian artifacts of dubious worth — but also apparently the unassuming owner of a treasure of great worth and great peril to those who seek it for ill gain.

Add an Egyptian (or a Turk, we're not sure), a Frenchman, a German (all archaeologists), a deceased antiquarian's devoted daughter and a con just out of San Quentin and you have part of the mystery.

Throw in a city beautification program complete with a committee comprised of a grasping female real estate salesperson, a more than slightly senile friend of Miss Clackett's, a drunken novelist and an overbearing politico and you have the other half of the mystery. Once we reach the point where people start dying, the pace picks up, for they don't just die singly, they reach their demise by twos and threes. There seem to be just too many characters in need of killing to knock them off one by one.

To have been critical this far is not to say one shouldn't go see this play. We very seldom have an opportunity to see an original play by a local artist produced locally. And this isn't a bad play or necessarily a boring one, it's just crowded.

The people in the crowd make it worthwhile for an evening's entertainment. Lee Brady is excellent as Miss Clackett, presenting a character who is old enough without dottering.

Loel Shuler is energetic and blundering as Binky Ramsden, the real estate woman, and pairs well with William Lewis as Biff Lancing, the alcoholic novelist. (Lewis' character is interpreted with a lot of comic originality missing on the part of others in the cast.)

Sahlan Kelly was suitably insufferable as Morley Trunk, chairman of MOMA, the source of an interesting word play in one scene.

James Goffard, of course, turns in a solid performance as Casimir ben Lafik, Stephen Dirk makes a good German with tendencies toward bribery, and Paul Bernard provides a decent French accent as Jean Fournier.

Vicki Yodis as Renata Pidgeon, the college student, and Adam Lembeck as reporter Colin Bradford are both just a little too bouncy for this setting, although Miss Yodis shows good timing, especially in the closing scene. She also has a fine scream.

"The Clackett House" should provide an interesting interlude dramatically if one is tired of the dinner theatre circuit. For locals, the support of CET adds another reason for going. And visitors who may miss the summer Shakespeare productions should take advantage of the opportunity to attend Forest Theatre and see many of the performers who regularly take the stage during the season.

THE MUSIC CORNER

BY IRVING W. GREENBERG

NEW RECORDINGS

TCHAIKOVSKY: SONGS (Galina Vishnevskaya, soprano; Mstislav Rostropovich, piano — Angel S-37166).

These eleven songs of Tchaikovsky presented here are the most lovable ones of this composer in this field, and they represent Tchaikovsky in his typical poignant idiomatic Russian stylistic mystique. Even in their basic lyric quality, they have, in addition, considerable dramatic impact, and their emotional manifestations are melodically most appealing and ingratiating. Particularly impressive, both vocally and musically, are the following ones: "Was I not a little blade of grass?" "Believe me not, my friend;" "The Cradle Song;" "If I had only known;" and "It was in the early Spring," in which sorrow, nostalgia, and meditative introspection, are all elements creating a luxurious, if, rather, small, tapestry of tonal and musical beauty and grandeur.

Galina Vishnevskaya, one of the former leading voices of the Bolshoi Opera in Moscow, is a soprano of consummate vocal proportions, with a full, rich, melodic voice, with dramatic, implications. She is capable of exhibiting a subtle and sensitive melodic involvement, as well as a vocal proficiency and beauty in their rendition. Her articulation, intonation, and tonal figuration and colorful evocation, are in the manner of the Western orientation of tonal and vocal projection. There is a wonderful eloquence, without any harshness or exaggerations of tones in her magnificent upper register, so unlike a number of other sopranos of Russian origin and training. These small vocal pieces are therefore brought out with creative and magnificent beauty. They are, indeed, performed as preludes to Tchaikovsky's magnificent operatic scores — Eugene Onegin, Pique Dame, and Joan of Arc.

Mstislav Rostropovich, the eminent cellist and conductor, as well as her husband, is presented here in a viable third role — that of a pianist accompanist. It was natural to expect that he would give her the type of coordinated and sensitive support that would fully bring out the viability of these gracious and sentimental songs. Together, they form a most incomparable team, thereby, allowing the listener to hear all the finest gradations and the varied nuances of these lovely miniatures in song.

The sound of both Galina Vishnevskaya's voice and Rostropovich's pianism is truly clarity itself, with a suave resonance, making it most characteristic and emphatic in its evocation of music as sound. This disc is most highly recommended as a most intimate example of the finest invocation of these songs by this incomparable duo.

MAGNIFICAT (VIVALDI, MONTEVERDI, MORALES) — (The Roger Wagner Chorale with strings and cembalo conducted by Roger Wagner — Angel S-36012).

In its liturgical setting, the Magnificat is part of the service of Vespers or Evensong. This service normally consists of an opening section, five Psalms, a hymn, and the final Magnificat.

Vivaldi, undoubtedly, the greatest Venetian composer of the Baroque era, penned many compositions for all types of instrumentation, with and without vocal attachments, mainly for San Marco in Venice, as well as for the Ospedale della Pietà, of which he was the musical director. The Magnificat is one of his most fervid and ardent works.

Monteverdi stands at the junction of the two important eras in music — the end of the golden age of Renaissance polyphony, and the emergence of opera and Baroque music. His compositions included two volumes of Madrigals, as well as the operas "Orfeo," "Incorazione di Poppea" and Arianna. This Magnificat is the final section of his "Vespers della Beata Vergine" of 1610.

At Community Hospital

Davey exhibit to open

By BRIAN BENNETT

The Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula will present a show by the Robert Davey family beginning Monday, May 3. One of a group of artists asked to show their work, the Daveys will feature four new paintings by Robert Davey, applique-stitchery by his wife, Shirley, and weavings by their daughter, Robin Davey. The show will be presented in the main lobby of the hospital.

Davey, who has his gallery in Su Vecino Court in Carmel, began his career in San Francisco with showings at the popular Bohemian restaurant, The Iron Pot. He went on to win first prize in the San Francisco Art Annual Contest two years in a row. Says Davey, "At that time, after the war, San Francisco had only a few galleries so most of the artists had to submit to competitive shows to get a name. Once you got a name, you could get into some of these galleries."

His works have been shown in several galleries including Maxwell's and Gump's in San Francisco, and the Manufacturer's Hanover Trust Gallery in New York City. He also has paintings in the permanent collections of the San Francisco Museum of Art, the city of San Francisco, and the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

In 1958 Davey brought his family to Carmel where they made their home. He served two years as president of the Carmel Art Association.

Davey has turned down offers to show his work outside of the galleries but considers the hospital show an opportunity to reach an appreciative public. "It's like when a comedian does a benefit," he says. "It's probably the best audience he'll ever have. He's needed."

Davey regards humor as a serious need. He likes to tell stories with his art and has used an American Folk Art theme for his new paintings.

"They're humorous and very colorful. I think they're very appropriate for a hospital," he says. "In selecting the theme of the paintings, I kept in mind where they would be hung. I think they'll be enjoyed."

Carmel resident John Bruno will be commuting from Hollywood for the next year while working as sequence director and animator for a full length feature film based on the popular story "Raggedy Ann."

Bruno, who won a great deal of admiration for his "God and the Trashman" sequence in the first Fritz the Cat flick, is doing the major drawing for many of the sequences. In addition, he times and directs the music for the film and assigns his assistants to do the final drawings.

Rod Phillips and John are the principal owners of the Gallery of Fine Comic Art in Carmel. The gallery is currently featuring a rare 1937 Tarzan strip drawn by Hal Foster in his pre-Prince Valiant days. Other recent acquisitions include contemporary B.C., Orphan Annie and Wizard of Id works as well as a 1953 Peanuts strip in which, according to Phillips, "the bodies were bigger and Snoopy looks more like a dog."

But perhaps my favorite comic art of the new collection are the drawings of Playboy artist Howard Shoemaker. Shoemaker's concept of reverse humor makes for quite a few amusing one-liners. Shoemaker, by the way, is a good friend of Carmel artist Bill Bates and has corresponded with Bill for the past five years.

Julie Domac, one of the best female vocalists that the Peninsula has to offer, had a pleasant surprise last weekend while performing with Foye Walkup at the Hatchcover. Her guitar teacher from a few years back — Frederick Noad — came to hear her perform on Saturday evening.

Noad, who recently returned from England, is regarded by many musicians as one of the premiere instructors of technique and has written many books on the subject.

Julie will return to the Hatchcover in August and will be included in the first Len Dixon Show for the Oceanview Cablevision folks. Yours truly may even make an appearance!

"Nothing pure is ever simple."

Using this line as a catalyst for his study of human desire and motivation, director-author John Byrum displays pornography and human genius side by side in "Inserts" currently playing at the Village Theatre.

"Inserts" is the story of Boy Wonder — a man who made it in the world of silent films while in his twenties and now is forced to make porn flicks for a bigtime hood in order to keep his foot in the business and a grip on his creative forces.

Joe Regelski

This is not a film for those who want to be entertained. It is similar to "Who's Afraid Of Virginia Woolf?" in human intensity and passages of brilliance in the script remind one of "Nashville." But you should be warned that the film depicts the staging and completion of a "blue movie" and therefore should be avoided by those whose sensibilities would be offended by such on-screen actions.

If you believe there is room for four letter words and the sex act on the screen when used tactfully to examine the human condition then you will be impressed with "Inserts".

It has only one set and were it not for its suggestive matter would probably have been a play. "Inserts" is fine adult drama with a sterling performance by Richard Dreyfuss as Boy Wonder.

It definitely is in the "sleeper" category and is the equal of its co-feature "Lenny".

Former Ramada Inn manager Gig Xifaras has left the club side of the motel business and has opened a talent agency in Carmel. Great American Artists presently has six California rooms to book its acts in and Gig hopes to add more potential stages to his list upon returning from an L.A. business trip... A good source tells me that the filming of this Christmas' big adventure flick — "Black Sunday" — is complete and the first draft of the film will be available for editing in June. "Black Sunday" is the story of a terrorists' attack upon the Super Bowl with international bribery the name of the game.

Tentative plans call for the Sounds of Joy to return to the Monterey Peninsula in June with new folks and a new act under their belts... Wilderness, a folk duo from San Jose, opens this weekend at the Hatchcover... Jazz buffs should note that the Count Basie Orchestra will appear at Sherwood Hall in Salinas on May 11 at 8 p.m. Tickets are priced at $8.50 and $7.50 and are available at BASS outlets and Odyssey Records on Cannery Row.

Comedy to open

"How's the World Treating You?" is the title and the question asked in the Studio Theatre's next production opening Friday, April 30.

British playwright Roger Milner has created an evening of original and farcical entertainment. The humor crackles with the same type of buffoonery displayed in the "Carry On..." film series, and the crazy hilarity of televisions "Monte Python and the Flying Circus."

This comedy farce allows several of the actors to play as many as three separate roles. The seven member cast includes veteran performers Gertrude Chappell, Bob Lotz and Roy Baxter, with Keith Decker, Deirdre Moore, Annie Holt Atherton and Ernest Zeppa under the direction of Michael Keller.

Producer Toni Field announced that the Studio Theatre begins their new Spring schedule playing Thursdays through Saturdays at 8:30, with Sunday performances one hour earlier. "How's the World Treating You?" is scheduled to play six weeks, and dinner and show reservations may be made by calling 624-1661.

Music Corner...

Morales was one of Spain's greatest polyphonists, writing numerous pieces of a religious nature, both for the Court and the Church. This present Magnificat is a striking and beautiful piece of music in this genre.

The Wagner Chorale, with the accompanying strings and the harpsichord continuo, points up with intensity, religious fervor, and a highly transparent limpidity these three Magnificats, giving them a most vital, luminous, and sensitive tonal color. By their dedication to the spirit and idea of these religious works, they achieve a wonderful sense of continuity in these three religious works by three different composers of different eras and different musical conceptions.

The restraintive sacerdotal influences are fully ascertainable in these three pieces, but, nevertheless, and, in spite of it, they represent the full glory of the Renaissance in its musical development and in its extension of these forms. In coordinating textural choral cantatas with splendid sound-producing forces, an element of great pageantry and nobility was interjected into these works.

The tonal sound of the Chorus, as well as of the accompanied strings and the harpsichord continuo, is an example of brilliancy tempered with a reproductive sonority and refinement. This disc is highly recommended, as a fine example of this most approachable of choral declamations of this type.

MAHLER: THE SONG OF THE EARTH (Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, baritone; Murray Dickie, tenor, Philharmonia Orchestra conducted by Paul Kletzki — Seraphim S-60260).

On their budget Seraphim label, Angel has released Mahler's "Song of the Earth," with two consummate vocal protagonists, Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, baritone; and Murray Dickie, tenor. Though this interpretation may lack the fire and impetuosity of approach by some of the competing versions, it, nevertheless, has a poetic vivacity and a vocal translucence in this reading, that serves as a new and lofty message of Mahler's thoughts. It maintains and brings out the highest possible musical and artistic standards, exposing these pieces based on ancient Chinese poems with a profundity of concept, a nobility and grandeur of thought, and an intensity of emotional meaning. Mr. Kletzki brings out the "Weltschmerz" that continually plagued Mahler's probing into the meaning of Life and Death. With extreme clarity, and scholarly understanding, without any of the extravagance and prolixity of Mahler's soulful outpourings of his spiritual problems, Mr. Kletzki leads the orchestra in this refined and commendable version.

Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau is one of the finest baritone of this, or any age, and he sings his part of these songs, with incomparable diction, and intonation of the finest kind. His modulations possess the most rhythmic and harmonic acuity. Murray Dickie, the tenor, though not as well known as Mr. Dieskau, seems to have a voice of exceptional orientation to this type of Mahlerian declamation, and strangely enough, there is a perfect rapport between the two soloists, as well as with the orchestral tutti. The Philharmonic Orchestra as led by Paul Kletzki, gives these soloists solid support, with a meditative and nostalgic expressiveness. The varied nuances of these poems are fully set forth with a well-rounded harmonic and modal assertion.

The sound of the vocalists and of the orchestra is clean, brilliant, and suavely sonorous. This disc is highly recommended, for its fine musical qualities, as well as for its price differential with competing recordings.

RAVEL: ORCHESTRAL MUSIC, VOL. IV. (Jean Martinon conducting The Orchestre de Paris — Angel S-37150).

On this record are recorded the following works: Le Tombeau de Couperin; Pavane pour une Infante Defunte; Alborado del Gracioso, Menuet Antique, and Un Barque sur l'Ocean.

This Suite was written to honor the memory of the composer's friends who died in World War I. This composition pays tribute to Couperin-le-Grande, an early eighteenth century composer of French harpsichord music. Ravel's suite is in the Baroque form and comprises eighteenth century dances and forms. I. Prelude; II. Fugue; III. Forlane; IV. Rigaudon; V. Menuet; VI. Toccata.

In style, Ravel preserves the serene and graceful manner of eighteenth century music without deserting modern harmony and rhythm; the stately minuet, for example, ends in an unresolved discord. But the fusion of the old and the new is achieved so naturally that no feeling of incongruity exists.

The fourth of the most celebrated "Miroirs" is Alborado del Gracioso. This is a morning serenade with a touch of buffoonery; it is a blend of Spanish rhythms and French irony.

Un Barque sur l'Ocean is the third of these "Miroirs." It also is a celebrated tone picture of the changing sea. It is the third of this Suite. Pavane pour une Infante defunte is an elegy. It is a slow and stately dance (the composer's first successful composition) and it was inspired by the death of a princess of the Royal house in Spain.

Menuet antique was Ravel's first published work, written when he was still a student. It blends traditional form with modern dissonances, doubtless, an effort of the young scholar to satisfy both the conservative structures of his teachers and his own experimental impulses in one work.

Jean Martinon, who conducts all these compositions on this record (as well as the three previous records of Ravel's orchestral output) is thoroughly cognizant with and oriented to the impressionistic idiom of Ravel. He leads The Orchestre de Paris with a magnificent sense of interpretive cognizance, with spaciousness, and with scintillating brilliance. The evocative rendition is most affecting and compelling in its tonal assertion.

Phrases are shaped up, held, and developed with perfect refinement and elegance. His stylistic discipline, his restrained, fervid, and vivid baton so strengthens his exposition of these pieces that they assume an aristocratic, inexhaustible, and imagnate qualities of personalized introspection. By so doing, he brings out not only the elegance and the wit of these compositions, but also their creative and completely remarkable musical innovations.

The orchestral round is absolutely brilliant, and clarity is the paramount effect throughout the recording. This disc, (as well as the three previous ones alluded to) are highly recommended as the most definitive recording of Ravel's orchestral music.

Sunset Views:

By FRANK H. RILEY
Director, SCCC

The Community Theatre will finish out the month of April with another weekend of Jean Anouilh's "Becket." Performances are scheduled for Thursday and Friday, April 29 and 30, and for Saturday, May 1, all at 8 p.m. Tickets for the historical drama are reserved by calling 624-2669. The Community Theatre is located on the Mission Street side of Sunset Center just South of 8th Avenue.

On Saturday, the 1st of May, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., the Music Department of Carmel High School will be hosting a district orchestra festival with selected musicians from various area high school orchestras. During the day the theatre will remain open so that anyone who is interested may drop in on an informal basis and observe the program. There is no charge for admission.

The Symphony plays the last concert of its regular season here at Sunset Center on Monday, May 3, at 8 p.m. Very special guest soloists will be The Romeros — father and three sons — known the world over for their superb guitar playing. In addition to the several guitar selections, Maestro Haymo Taeuber will conduct the Monterey County Symphony in works by Richard Strauss, Rimsky-Korsakov, and Paul Dukas. Tickets are sometimes available for the sold-out performances — call 624-8511 for latest availability.

A special film presentation is scheduled for Tuesday, May 4, at 8 p.m. At that time we will be showing the renowned Hamburg Opera Company's film of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Several opera films produced by the Hamburg Company last season delighted our audiences. The "Fidelio" film is a new one not previously shown here. The plot, like those of many operas of the day, involves intrigue, double-dealing, and girls disguised as men with all working out to a satisfactory conclusion. The Beethoven music, of course, is delightful. Tickets priced at only $1 will be available at the door beginning 7:30 p.m. the night of the performance.

Another final concert for the concert season will be presented on Thursday, May 6, by the Carmel Music Society. The featured artists are the members of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra. The virtuoso musicians who comprise the group have been playing together since 1955, and over the long association have developed an unparalleled level of excellence. Tickets for this concert may be obtained in advance by calling 624-2085 or may be purchased at the door beginning one-half hour before the performance.

The delightful "Sound in the Sea" children's whale exhibit, which has proved to be so very popular, will come down on Saturday to be replaced on Monday, the 3rd, by a group of twenty watercolors by the West Coast artist, Bruce Pierce. Pierce's work is closely associated with the West Coast and has been recognized in exhibits and articles in many places and many publications. The show, provided to us by Old Bergen Art Guild of Bayonne, New Jersey, will remain in the Marjorie Evans Gallery until June 4.

In the Sunset Center Theatre foyer, the current exhibit of weaving will remain through May 16. On Monday, the 17th, a very special exhibit of new works by Irene Lagorio will open in the foyer gallery. There will be several surprises in the Lagorio exhibit and all who attend Sunset Center events regularly will be especially interested in seeing it.

Baseball fans can watch the Carmel Youth Center games in the North Parking lot of Sunset Center on Monday and Wednesday evenings beginning at 7 p.m. But car parkers must remember not to linger in the North lot after 6 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays when that area converts from parking lot to ball field.

Watercolor exhibit set

Starting on May 3 and continuing to June 4, watercolors by Bruce Pierce will be on display in the Marjorie Evans Gallery at Sunset Center. The gallery is open 1-5 p.m., Monday through Friday, and one hour before a performance in the Sunset Center Theatre. There is no admission charge.

California artist, Bruce Pierce, considers the entire West Coast his studio. A member of the California National Water Color Society and Watercolor West, his paintings have been exhibited with the American Watercolor Society and at various exhibits in his home state and throughout the United States. His watercolors have also appeared in a feature article on the Watercolor Page of American Artist magazine (Feb., 1973) and in La Revue Moderne des Arts Et de la Vie in France (July, 1973). His work is in numerous collections in the United States and abroad. Pierce's exhibit is being circulated on tour of the nation's universities, museums, libraries, and art centers by Old Bergen Art Guild of Bayonne, New Jersey.

DVORAK: CELLO CONCERTO IN B MINOR; BUCH: KOL NIDREI (Pablo Casals, cellist, with the Czech Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by George Szell, and the London Symphony Orchestra conducted by Landon Ronald — Seraphim 60240).

The Dvorak Cello Concerto was written during the composer's stay in the U.S. and it uses American folk material. An extended orchestral introduction presents the two main themes of the first movement; the second, in the solo horn, against the strings, is in the style of a Negro spiritual.

After the appearance of the solo instrument, both themes are worked out, often with interesting embellishments by the solo cello. Two expressive melodies dominate the second movement. The first is stated by the clarinet against an oboe and bassoon accompaniment; the other is presented by the strings after the solo cello has repeated the opening subject. The entire movement has deep emotional content, and is of an affecting tenderness.

The finale, on the other hand, is a joyous outburst, opening with a strong rhythmic theme that leads to the first principal melody, which sounds like a peasant dance. The second theme, in the clarinet, with embellishments by the solo cello, is also spirited. The concerto concludes with reminiscences of the first and second movements; the solo dies away to a pianissimo; then there is a crescendo, and the last measures are taken up by the orchestra, ending stormily.

Kol Nidrei by Max Bruch is a traditional Hebrew melody sung on the eve of the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur), the holiest in the Jewish calendar. Bruch bases his principal melody on this old synagogal chant. It is heard simply in the solo cello, after which it is varied. A second main melody, this time Bruch's own, is then offered by the orchestra and repeated by the solo instrument.

These two works were recorded in 1937, and the transfer to L.P.'s shows their age. However, at that time, Pablo Casals was at the height of his technical and interpretive powers, and the Czech Philharmonic Orchestra under George Szell was a fabulous musical organization, so that a performance of almost legendary proportions was achieved. Casals' large, warm tone and his intimate conception and rendition of this work make it most outstanding.

The surfaces and the sound quality are not up to modern standards (how could they be in 1937), but the incandescent luminosity of Casals' playing recommends this disc as one of the great performances of any age.

Air Force band to perform

The United States Air Force band and the Singing Sergeants, the world's most traveled musical organization, will appear in Monterey on Tuesday evening, May 11.

The free concert in King Hall, Naval Postgraduate School, will begin at 8 p.m.

Since organization in 1942, the band and chorus have made 12 international tours and have visited over 50 countries on five continents.

This has been in addition to numerous swings across the United States, with visits in all 50 states.

Free tickets for the performance may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Air Force Band Tickets, P.O. Box 271, Monterey, Ca., 93940. There is a limit of six tickets per request. Ticket requests will be filled on a first come, first served basis.

Although the youngest of the major service bands, the Air Force band has been one of the most active. It had its beginnings in World War II as the Bolling Army Air Corps Band, and since that time has achieved an international reputation.

The Singing Sergeants chorus was originally formed from within the ranks of the band itself but it is now composed of vocal majors who have joined the Air Force.

Symphony to play Carmel May 3

The Monterey County Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Haymo Taeuber, will feature the Romeros Quartet in concert at Monterey Peninsula College on May 2, Sunset Auditorium, Carmel, May 3 and Sherwood Hall, Salinas, May 4.

The four Spanish artists, who have come to be known on the international concert scene as "The Royal Family of the Guitar," are Celedonio Romero and his three sons — Celin, Pepe and Angel. At this writing the Quartet's 1976-77 season includes visits to many cities for recitals plus engagements with the Buffalo Philharmonic, the San Antonio Symphony, the Portland Symphony, the Victoria Symphony and the Calgary Symphony.

In solo and quartet, recordings have enhanced the fame of the Romeros, including commissioned and dedicated works of admiring composers. In 1967 the quartet commissioned the famous Spanish composer, Joaquin Rodrigo to write a concerto for four guitars and orchestra. The "Concierto Andaluz," to be performed during the coming Monterey County Symphony Association concert, received its world premiere with the San Antonio Symphony in November 1967, and has been repeated often since. The work's success led to a recording combined with Rodrigo's "Concierto de Aranjuez" performed by Angel.

The May concert program will include "The Rosenkavalier" Suite of Richard Strauss, "Le Coq d'Or" Introduction and Wedding Procession of Nicolai Rimskii-Korsakov and Paul Dukas' "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Tickets for Monterey and Salinas performances are available at the usual Symphony outlets and at the Symphony office, Carmel, as well as at the Box offices the night of performance. Carmel's series is sold out except for some released tickets which may be made available by those who cannot attend. Call 624-8511 for further information.

City Council

Steckler presents background data

In a lengthy special City Council meeting Tuesday night, consultant Melvin J. Steckler presented "background" for his budget-cutting city analysis, and June 7 was set as the date for the first work session of the council and city department heads.

Steckler's 26-page preliminary report was explained in detail to the council during the meeting which ended just before midnight, with Steckler stressing that this was only the fiscal portion of his report. The departmental studies, already begun, will culminate in at least two full days of discussions between the council and the city's eight department heads during which the effects of specific budget cuts will be assessed.

Although there was some questioning of the usefulness of Steckler's fiscal data, the council generally remained silent while Steckler presented his material, and indicated they would study it further.

Gunnar Norberg, the only councilman not present, was reported by Mayor Gene Hammond to be in traction in the hospital suffering from a slipped disk.

The final version of Steckler's $15,000 report, begun in January, is due by June 30. Although no promises were made, Steckler indicated to the council last December that he proposed to isolate $500,000 worth of possible savings to the city, and that the city might reasonably hope for a budget reduction of $250,000 in the 1976-77 fiscal year.

In his preliminary report to the council Tuesday, Steckler presented a financial analysis of where the money goes in Carmel city government, compared Carmel to 38 somewhat similar California cities, and laid down four models of what Carmel could be in the future.

Steckler found the city to be basically sound financially. His five-year projection of revenues and expenditures (excluding any extra capital acquisition) showed a $1.2 million fund balance in 1981, or roughly 40 per cent of the projected budget.

This projection, Steckler explained, does not differ significantly from his earlier projections which showed the city's reserves exhausted in five years, it just takes into account increased revenues from sales and property taxes.

Steckler also detailed $3 million worth of capital program requirements for the city over the next five years, dividing the programs up into three groups of priorities.

At this point Hammond said that the programs, derived from the city's general plan, would be substantially different now if reviewed by council, and he said this pointed up a need to give the plan a going-over.

In comparing Carmel with other similar cities around the state, Steckler emphasized that, in terms of real property, Carmel is extraordinarily wealthy. By applying a 75 percent rise in assessment Steckler expects for next year, Carmel comes out as having one of the highest per capita assessed valuations in California — $12,000 compared to a state average of $3,080.

Steckler concluded his report with the presentation of four possible futures for Carmel: the small city model, the suspended village model, the continued evolution model and the greater Carmel model.

Councilman David Hughes questioned the usefulness of these models at the end of the meeting, saying that the council needed specific advice on where to make cuts, not models. Hughes feared that they weren't getting at the quarter million dollar cost reduction.

Maybe those models weren't of great interest, Steckler told Hughes, but Steckler felt they were an essential part of the analysis process.

"They're of great interest," Hughes assured Steckler, "but I'd like to see how to get there from here."

Steckler, however, repeated that this kind of data was important background. Although, he said, he had not discussed specific departmental budget requests, he would be doing that soon and the need for this supporting material would eventually become apparent.

BUDGET

In conjunction with Melvin Steckler's fiscal analysis of Carmel, city finance officer Ralph Cowen has prepared a tentative budget proposal for the 1976-77 fiscal year that appears only slightly higher than last year's budget.

The tentative budget proposal was prepared at the request of Steckler to be used when the council and department heads get together to discuss the possibilities of cuts. The final proposed budget, to be presented to the council in June, may have changes.

According to the tentative budget, Carmel should be able to get by next year with $1,904,173, compared to last year's $1,977,890, but because of current debate over the future of Harrison

Memorial Library, that budget figure was not included. Last year the library budget amounted to $177,125, which would bring this year's budget up over last year's by about $100,000.

The big financial issue still unsettled is the city employee salaries and benefits, which Cowen says amounts to about 60 percent of the city's budget. Cowen estimated a 10 percent salary increase, similar to last year's, to come up with his figures.

While many of the individual department budgets remained about the same, a few of the more important changes were: finance down $36,500; police up $23,000; fire up $15,500; forestry up $22,500; and the Sunset Center up $28,000. Non-departmental costs were down $41,000.

Pine Cone photo contest announced

Visions '76, a photography competition with over $500 in prizes and open to all amateur photographers on the Peninsula, is being sponsored by the Carmel Pine Cone.

The contest will feature cash and gift certificate prizes in six categories — portraiture (animals and people); scenic; open (including special effects); Peninsula life; junior (entrants under 18); and publisher's award (best action photograph).

A sweepstakes award with a $100 cash prize and a $40 gift certificate will be awarded for best of show. Category prizes include $25 cash and $25 gift certificates for first place category winners and $15 gift certificates for second place category winners. Honorable mention winners will be awarded certificates.

Winning entries will be published in a special edition of the Carmel Pine Cone on June 15. Winning entries will also be exhibited at Sunset Center, June 21-26 and at other selected sites to be announced at a later date.

Judges for the contest will include Morley Baer, Al Weber, Richard Garrod, Henry Gilpin and George Short.

Entries will be accepted no later than 5 p.m. Friday, May 28 at the Carmel Pine Cone office on Dolores and 8th streets. Entries may be mailed or hand delivered. All entries must be mounted and no larger than 18 inches by 24 inches. Entry forms are available at the Carmel Pine Cone and selected stores on the Peninsula. Rules and entry form appear on page 44 of this issue.

Cultural Commission

1,200 seat theatre recommended

The Cultural Commission voted Monday to recommend to the City Council acceptance of a $3.5 million 1,200 seat theatre and multilevel parking proposal, in concept.

The proposal, presented to the Cultural Commission by architects Robert Stanton, Walter Burde and Eugene Bayol at the behest of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Strauch, would include building an annex at the southern end of Sunset Center. The new theatre wing would include a balcony and improved stage facilities. The existing theatre would be remodeled into a smaller theatre with a thrust stage.

The increased size of the theatre would require additional parking facilities planned for the southern end of Sunset Center. The parking facility would consist of three levels and a total of 235 spaces. The parking facility itself would cost roughly $600,000.

The proposal, in one form or another, has been before the commission awaiting approval since late last year. The biggest obstacle to receiving approval seemed to be the matter of financing.

At a study session held Thursday, April 22, the commission repeatedly questioned Merle Strauch about funding for the proposal. Strauch, if the concept received approval, vowed to raise the needed funding at no expense to the city. He had financed the plans up to this point.

At Thursday's meeting Strauch was asked what fund raising experience he had and in what manner he proposed to raise funds for this project.

Strauch answered that the proposal was in the "cocktail party" stage as far as fund raising goes. However, he emphasized that there is money available in the community for the project and that he would be able to secure it. He guessed that it would take at least two years. Strauch also said he had undertaken a similar, and successful, fund raising effort in Memphis, Tenn.

Strauch brought two resource people with him to the meeting, both of whom spoke favorable of the proposal.

Ron Caya, arts director for San Jose, and Tom Bacchetti, director of public events for Stanford University, both said they were strongly in favor of the 1,200 seat theatre proposal.

Francis Herrick, president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, appeared at the Thursday session to voice approval of a new theatre at Sunset Center, but added that the committee's board felt a smaller concept was more acceptable. Herrick said one drawback to the 1,200 seat theatre was the necessary additional parking. He said he felt the CCC would willingly go along with an 800 seat theatre, but not the larger proposal.

The proposal will now go before the City Council, possibly at the first meeting in May on Tuesday, May 4.

THE SCALE MODEL of the Sunset Theatre proposal depicts the 1,200-seat annex (right) and modifications in the courtyard area. Not shown is the multilevel parking structure which is located at the southern end of Sunset Center. The complex, as recommended by the cultural commission, would cost $3.5 million, all of which Merle Strauch has indicated he would raise. The model is currently on display at the Carmel Art Association.

Junior League elects officers

Newly elected executive officers and provisional members of the Junior League of Monterey County were honored at a luncheon given by the league's sustaining members at the home of Mrs. Matthew Jenkins at Stillwater Cove in Pebble Beach.

Members of the new executive board are Mrs. Roger Teig of Salinas, president; Mrs. Brian Kelly of Carmel, first vice president; Mrs. Donald Day of Salinas, second vice president; Mrs. Brian Finegan of Salinas, treasurer; Mrs. Theodore Calhoon of Pebble Beach, corresponding secretary.

The provisional members, who will spend the coming year studying civic, cultural and economic aspects of the county and become more acquainted with its volunteer opportunities, include the following women from the Peninsula:

Mmes. Robert Adams, Thomas Alexander, Robert Brooks, Stephen Dyer, Robert Evans, Thorne Hacker, William Hamilton, Francis Harris, Paul James, Patrick Kelley, Jeffrey Lehr, Richard Littell, Jr., Michael McClure, Donald Simpson, Gene Takigawa, Donald Wiesner, Jayne Wilsey and Ann Campbell.

New provisional members from the Salinas area include: Mmes. Lews Cantor, Michael Cling, Thomas Gorman, Jr., Dennis Hoeft, Holman King, James Lawton, Ralph Romine, Sanders Watkins, and Barbara Abbe Wilcom.

Projects to receive Junior League financial and volunteer support during 1976-77 include Creative Response, Community Schools Resource Program in Salinas, Community Schools Resource Center, Monterey, Funding Information Bureau, Seaside Infant Care Center and the Women In Action Day Care Center.

NEWLY ELECTED Junior League officers Mrs. Charles Aucutt and Mrs. Brian Kelly are at Mimi's Bar and Grill which sits on Stillwater Cove and is actually part of the Matthew Jenkins home. Junior League members honored their new officers and provisional members at the luncheon last Thursday at the Jenkin's home.

Middle School picnic set May 2

"We want this to be as casual as possible, sort of a come as you are affair," said Ann Gilsean, one of the Middle School parents who is helping to make arrangements for the May 2 family picnic.

The Middle School family picnic will begin at 2 p.m. at the Carmel River Beach. Students, teachers, parents, and other family members are invited to attend. The Parent Faculty Club, which is sponsoring the picnic, wants to encourage students to come with their families.

"We view this as an opportunity to relate to each other in a different kind of way. People will make this affair, and we hope the traditional roles will be left at home," said Maureen Girard, another of the parents who is helping coordinate the picnic.

Everyone attending should bring a blanket, one log, a picnic meal and beverages. Sugar free soft drinks will be sold by the Parent Faculty Club.

In addition to the picnic encouraged to bring kites, other equipment suitable for items, those attending are frisbees, softballs, and any beach activity.

Calendar

Notice of community events are solicited for the Calendar. Material submitted should be typewritten, brief and include all pertinent information regarding dates, times, sponsoring group and location. ## Hawaiian dishes

How does the sound of "Pineapples, Passion Fruit and Poi" affect you? It takes us back to non-rise Hawaii when a fragrant lei symbolized many emotions mingled together. Welcome, Joy, Friendship. Tossing one's delicate flower garland overboard while we sailed out to other islands meant good luck as it returned to Diamond Head.

Being pre-Pearl, there has never been anything like that dancing under the stars at the Royal Hawaiian and Waialae Country Club. The utmost in Planters' Punches, horseback rides on the beach, pikaki leis, ginger too, with a breezy bouquet all of their own.

Try to duplicate that most diverting native fishing, hukilau. Expert swimmers first take a huge net way out. Much splashing and fluttering of ti leaves attached to long ropes frightening fish into well weighted hand made nets. Glass or cork floaters provide lifters ups. All assist in brief garb to pull the net shoreward with colorful leaping, strangely shaped translucent Hawaiian fish within. This is similar to that other sport we recall so vividly, spear fishing. After dark, lighted kukui torches outline bronzed fishermen in malos, goggles, carrying spears and gunny sacks. We would sit on the shore at Lanakai joining in ancient chants such as "Imu au, Kuu Ipo and Na Hei U Havahee (Song of the Island) to strumming ukeleles. Our summer cottage was right at the lagoon's edge where we played water polo until exhausted for it is a strenuous game. How reviving to just flop down in the turquoise wavelets. Then a refreshing lunch or supper.

Barbecued Meat Sticks: Have meat man slice 3 lbs. round steak very thinly. Wipe with damp cloth and pound with wooden mallet. Cut into 1½ inch squares. String on slim bamboo sticks, about 4 on each. Combine ½ cup soy sauce thinned with ¼ cup water plus bourbon or brandy. (In the old days it was native okolehau) white granulated sugar and scraped, crushed fresh ginger root, mashed garlic, grated onion to taste. Let stand one hour. Strain, working out all possible flavor into liquid. Soak meat in this bath at least 4 hours. When everyone is ready, broil meat quickly over red hot coals, painting on more marinade as needed to keep moist. Chinese dried mushrooms, soaked until limp, are added to the bamboo skewer the last few minutes. This recipe is from The Hawaii Visitors Bureau and is always served on fluffy white rice. It makes excellent hors d'oeuvres or pupus as they call them.

Speaking of passion fruit, it is known as lilikoi or water lemon "over there." It may be found growing rampant in most any overgrown area. Passion fruit is the yellow skinned variety, quite sour. The lilikoi is sweet and purple. Fresh passion fruit juice is excellent. To freeze: pour juice into ice trays, empty into "sacks" when frozen; keep in freezer for future use.

One of favorite dishes is the ultra delicate fish Charcoal Broiled Mahimahi resembling Florida's pompano of the same evanescent airy texture. We can substitute any of the sole or flounder family found in Monterey Bay. For each lb. of filleted mahimahi, skin left on and cut into liberal slices, make a tantalizing Tropical Sauce: Two Tbsps. butter and fresh lime juice, each; a good dash of dry Vermouth. Put in skillet and set on edge of outdoor grill over medium lighted briquets. Baste fillets and broil skin side down for a good crust, but no burning. Flip and baste once more to brown lightly. Serve with fresh lime wedges and avocado bites. Creamed spinach souffles are made from native grown spinach leaves, chopped finely and comined with coconut milk. On our mainland we won't go wrong with frozen spinach souffles. Finish with as many tropical fruits you can assemble. Kona Coffee and sweet aloha.

BE YOUNG WITH YOGA

Yoga, the world's most ancient system for physical and mental fitness proposes that age has little to do with how many years ago you were born. Rather it depends upon how many of the "characteristics of age" you possess. A person can be "old" stiff and out of shape at 40 and can be youthfully vital and flexible at 70. What are some of these characteristics?

Let us compare the 8 major areas:

AGE

1. Stiffness - tightness - immobility; awkwardness; lack of poise.
2. Tension - nervousness - irritability - poor disposition; insomnia.
3. Fatigue - weariness - exhaustion.
4. Inadequate blood circulation with resultant dull complexion; wrinkles; general poor health.
5. Loss of muscle tone, resulting in weakness, sagging and flabbiness.
6. Obesity; inability to control and maintain correct weight.
7. Slowness or loss of ability to replace these vital elements.
8. Weakening of the faculties of mind resulting in senility; depression.

YOUTH

1. Flexibility - suppleness - agility; grace - poise - balance.
2. Ability to relax as necessary - calmness - composure - serenity; restful sleep.
3. Vitality - energy - endurance.
4. Proper blood circulation resulting in the health and strength of vital organs and glands.
5. Resilience of muscles resulting in firmness; taut skin; strength.
6. Normal weight (in accordance with bone structure) and ability to control and correctly distribute weight.
7. Quick replacement of vital elements continually used by body and brain.
8. Alertness and clarity of the faculties of mind; optimism.

The gentle, slow-motion exercises of Yoga gradually redevelop the characteristics of youth. They allow you to exercise easily, without strain, no matter what your age or when you last exercised.

LOCAL COURSE BEGINS SOON

The Carmel branch of Richard Hittleman's Yoga for Health School will begin daytime and evening courses the week of May 10. They are geared for those who "haven't exercised in years" giving special attention to the problems of stiffness, weight control, poor blood circulation, insomnia and lack of vitality.

FREE INTRODUCTORY CLASS

All who are interested in discovering the many practical benefits of Yoga are invited to attend the first class of this course without cost or obligation. Registration is limited to ensure personal attention. To reserve your space and to receive a free descriptive brochure call 659-2992 or write to Yoga for Health, Box 5836, Carmel 93921.

REMEMBER WHEN?

50 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone
May 8, 1926

COMSTOCK ERECTS PICTURESQUE ART SHOP

Once again someone has done something "different" in Carmel. One night when you made your last trip to the post office, the lot opposite the one owned by R.C. De Yoe — was just a lot; the next morning when you came down to Blood's to get that loaf of bread that you forgot the night before, the lot housed a fantastic little building.

But it isn't one of those rubber stamp things that consist chiefly of cement, glass and right angles. To attempt to describe it would be like trying to tell of Queen Mab's Grotto for the fairies, or the Palace of the Kewpies, or the cave where the "squidgichum" swallows themselves. Then again one might translate in terms of North European architecture — broken roof line, the nicked casements, the hipped gable in front that looks so like a bonnet to the architect that he calls it a hood, the irregular line of roof beginning with the peak of the gable, broken next by the chimney, then the arched gate in the rock wall, and finally the wall, gradually disappearing in a clump of shrubbery. It isn't a material thing; it is purely imaginative. It is built of dreams — of moth wings — of the shimmer of moon light.

This fantastic little creation is going to be Bonnie Lee's shop where she may chance to sell everything from lemon drops to opera glasses, but we fancy that she will have some delightful Colonial antiques — perchance an old grandfather's clock, a highboy, a spinning wheel sitting out in the sunny patio behind the intriguing wall.

The date of the opening will be announced later. You'll want to meet Bonnie Lee, she made this shop possible, and we feel sure that Hugh Comstock, the Builder of Dreams, will be given a place of honor on opening day.

25 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone
April 27, 1951

COURT SHUFFLE PENDING

As the PINE CONE went to press yesterday afternoon, the city council was meeting in executive session to discuss whether or not Carmel would petition the supervisors at their meeting in Salinas Tuesday to set up a special Carmel Judiciary district.

In accordance with the state amendment passed last election streamlining the California Court system, all police courts become non-existent at the end of this year. Unless the supervisors see their way clear to creating a judicial district here, Carmelites will no longer have a police judge of their own, but will have to trek to Monterey to appear before a municipal judge to pay for an over-time parking ticket or try to argue themselves out of a drunk driving charge.

ONE YEAR OLD

During a recess Monday night, Commissioner Jean van Loben Sels produced a cake impressively decorated with "Happy Birthday" and one candle, a freezer of ice cream and coffee in celebration of the Sunset Commission having completed one year of service to the city. Mrs. Jeanie Morgan Klenke, Mrs. Effie Mead and Councilman Gunnar Norberg, who comprised the audience, were invited to share the refreshments with commissioners and Hugh Bayless commission secretary, and the press.

Peter Dyer was reelected chairman of the commission earlier in the evening. Rear Admiral C.W. Fischer (USN Ret) was elected vice-chairman.

PLANNER STRENGTHEN LANDSCAPING CONTROL

Landscaping required for new or remodeled buildings in the commercial zone shall not only be established but henceforth guaranteed maintenance before a building permit is granted. Carmel planners resolved yesterday. After considerable debate on the merits of friendly persuasion, the planning commission agreed by which the required percentage of landscaping will be kept in the condition indicated by the permit seekers on their plans.

WATER SAFETY CLASSES

The local chapter of the Red Cross reminds all firefighters, police and life guards that they must be certified in first aid and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation by the end of 1976. This must be done in compliance with Title 17 Administrative Code of the State of California Health and Safety Act. All water safety instructors must be trained in the new method of water safety. Carmel High School instructor Phyllis Crockett is authorized in the new method and will teach classes in the Carmel area. Prospective students are asked to call the Red Cross office at 624-6921 as soon as possible if interested in these classes.

Lester Rowntree...

homesick. But you learn to stand on your own two feet. It's hell. But a dose of it is good for everyone. You learn a lot from it."

In the hills, Lester says she lived by her intuition and on her enthusiasm. She said, "Food doesn't mean much when you're up there. It's the work that counts. You get enthusiastic and care about your work. That's what counts."

Her intuition and some caution prevented her from ever being snowed-in up in the mountains. "I'm a great believer in being cautious," Lester said, "and I live by my intuition a lot."

"It's woman's best tool — only we don't cultivate it enough. It's never let me down. I think men have it and when they get concerned they use it," Lester continued. She concluded that it was easy to lose touch with intuition but one thing that saved her from doing this was her unbusiness-like nature.

In fact, she feels that the business-like nature of men ("the need to make gains") is what allows men to get out of the habit of using their intuition. Lester said, "You have to follow the feeling. To stay in touch with yourself."

This is what she was doing in her career, she says. Her followers attribute her wearing pants to her being a woman's rights champion. (She is reportedly one of the first women to wear pants in the New Jersey area. She lived there with her husband. Her garden, in addition to being used as a government testing area, was filled with California flora.) She says this isn't so and that she wore pants because it made gardening easier.

Her use of the name Lester, her maiden name, came about in boarding school she says and had nothing to do with women's liberation. "My name was Gertrude. Can you see me as a Gertrude? But don't get me wrong," she said, "I believe in women's liberation. I just feel, if you want liberation, take it. I guess I never needed a group for this; but I'm glad they are there for I guess everyone isn't as ornery as I am."

All her life, Lester felt a kinship with plants. She feels getting to work with plants has given her great peace with herself. She thinks of this as her greatest accomplishment rather than her work. "This peace with nature. This understanding and oneness I felt with plants is what I've earned from my work. And I'll take it with me, so what is it I have given?" she asks.

In her career as a gardener, landscaper, teacher lecturer and seed collector she has given much. Her work gives some of the best documentation of California flora from the deserts to the snowcapped mountains.

The state of California's use of wildflowers along highways and in state gardens is in great part owed to Lester Rowntree. Her work is considered accurate and excellent and has served as inspiration to many professionals in the plant field as well as many amateur gardeners.

One plant is giving Lester some concern right now and that's pampas grass. "We must get rid of the pampas grass," she declared. "Oh, I can't remember all the names of the plants it is threatening. But it can't be allowed to grow free. It is choking out many good plants. The excuse that it is costly to eradicate it is foolish," she continued, adding that it would cost the state much more later. "Not only in money but in valuable plants."

But mostly Lester lives on memories and sharing these memories of her times in the mountains. The sound of streams and snow melting are two of her favorite sounds, she says.

"But you know the sound I love the best? The one that says to me, 'this is home'. Though there is something haunting about it, I loved the sound. When traveling, I knew I was back home when I heard it. Usually it would come just after I tossed my sleeping bag on the ground. It meant home. It was the sound of the coyotes."

Gentrain enters 20th century

The concepts and forces developed at the beginning of the 20th century will be studied in Monterey Peninsula College's next Gentrain course, "Twentieth Century: Part I" which begins Tuesday May 4 at 10 a.m. in Lecture Forum 102 on the campus.

The years to be studied are 1914-1945. "Following the period of synthesis between 1890-1914, exciting and tremendously important developments emerged as the result of that period and from World War I," Robert Nelson, Gentrain director, said.

"Because the war broke down social barriers, the world was never the same again. These breakdowns and the Great Depression, reflected in the arts, literature, drama, philosophy and politics of the time, will be considered in the unit. The events of this period also set the stage for World War II," Nelson continued.

Gentrain classes are held each Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with a one-hour lunch break. The courses are open to students for college credit and to community members on a non-credit basis for those who are just interested in learning more about their world. No tests or papers are required under this option.

More information on this Gentrain unit and registration may be obtained by calling the Gentrain Information Center at 649-1150, ext. 338.

School board

Hiring policy approved

The Carmel School Board adopted an affirmative action policy and implementation procedures with a clause specifically indicating that reverse discrimination is not intended.

In a 4-0 vote (Elizabeth Bell was absent) the board adopted at first reading a revision to the affirmative action policy which states in part, "the Board neither advocates nor intends that reverse discrimination be practiced."

In a separate action the board adopted implementation procedures for the policy with a 3-1 vote (James Miller cast the sole dissenting vote). In discussion of the implementation procedures, the board focused on specific numbers suggested in target goals for four job categories.

The question of specifying numbers of minorities and women desired in each job category bothered Miller.

"I'm having a hard time with these target goal numbers. It is inconsistent to say hire the best qualified and then say we have to have specific goals... we can accomplish what we're trying without establishing target numbers," he said.

Other board members echoed Miller's complaint. Richard Wilsdon, president of the board, described the situation as a "fundamental contradiction." He went on to say that however much he was dissatisfied with the idea of listing specific numbers, the state would in the future mandate that some numbers be accepted and unless board members were willing to go to court and sue the state, the specific plan should be adopted.

An election to determine sole representation for district staff members will be held in the future according to information presented to the board by Harris Taylor, superintendent of schools.

The election will determine whether the Association of Carmel Teachers or the Carmel Federation of Teachers will represent the certificated staff. No date has yet been set.

In other action the board: — authorized payment of $1,071 for membership in the California School Boards Association.

— passed a resolution stating that the Carmel district, along with others, will guarantee payment of a loan issued by the state to the Salinas Union High School District for the Regional Occupational Program if Salinas should default.

— approved a consolidated application for Title I and Early Childhood Education funds.

— accepted a report on the one-week Yosemite resident education program participated in by Carmel High School students and faculty.

THE LYCEUM held a bike clinic to teach beginning bike riders safety rules and bike care. The students, kindergarten through third, saw films, reviewed traffic rules with a representative from the Monterey County Sheriff's Department and got bike riding pointers from teacher Jody Connley. Anne Cox passes out certificates of completion to students (from left) Hailey and Tanna Franke, Laurie Tolles and Michael Cox.

'Spaceship Earth' to visit MPC

"Spaceship Earth: A Look at the Earth Through the Eyes of Aliens" will be presented Friday April 30 at 7:30 p.m. in Lecture Forum 103 on the Monterey Peninsula College campus.

Robert Christopherson, who teaches geography and urban environmental planning at American River College in Sacramento, hit upon his idea of an alien visit to this planet after a slide presentation he gave to one of his classes. Since then, he has made more than 360 presentations throughout the country.

During the presentation viewers, guided by Christopherson, enter the earth's atmosphere as aliens from another planet sent to investigate the functioning systems of energy, air, water and land. They understand these systems are the primary support for the earth's survival.

Christopherson is presenting the program in support of Proposition 15, the Nuclear Safeguards Initiative.

A talk by Dr. John J. McKetta on "Energy Needs in America" which had been scheduled by the Monterey County Foundation for Conservation for Friday April 30 at 3 p.m. has been cancelled.

ISOTONER CHIN STRAP

Time to give sagging chin and neck contours a beauty boost. It couldn't be simpler — an Isotoner Chin Strap that snaps snugly on, covering throat, neck and chin... and working "neck-in glove" while the strap does its self-action massage. Wear it for an hour, while reading, cooking, watching T.V. or relaxing.

ISOTONER EYES BEAUTIFUL MASQUE

New discovery eye masque by Isotoner and the new eye cream work together. As you relax, this exclusive dual action beauty treatment works to smooth and soften YOU. Help keep skin dewy-moist supple. Guard against dry lines, wrinkles. And it gives all its concentrated care to the delicate eye area (too often the first signs of age due to less natural oils).

$19,235 robbery reported by shop

Carmel's Peking Gift Shop was the scene of a major robbery last week, and the Pine Inn was hit with four separate incidents of theft over the weekend.

Joseph Yang, owner of the oriental gift shop on San Carlos in "The Mall", reported that in excess of $19,235 worth of art and jewelry had been stolen from his shop during the evening of April 22.

According to police, the shop was entered when suspects removed six louvered panes from the store's window. The shop had no alarm system and articles were taken from the display case and a China cabinet.

Yang told police that the suspect or suspects seemed to know what they were looking for, since only the best items had been taken.

Although police recently gave chase to a man they believe to be the cat burglar who preys on Carmel hotels, three hotel guests lost cameras and cash over the weekend to a thief who broke into their rooms, and a mink coat disappeared — all in the Pine Inn.

Richard Q. Perry, an insurance man from Salt Lake City, returned to his room Friday evening after dinner to find his bedroom window ajar. He later noticed that his camera, worth $150, was missing from the top of the bureau. Access for the thief, who took only the camera from the room, was believed to have been from the roof.

William O. Proby of Washington found the front door of his Pine Inn room ajar when he returned from golf Saturday, and noticed his camera and flash attachment, worth $170, was missing from inside his suitcase. Overlooked by the thief was a calculator and a tape recorder.

Tony and Anita Stallone of Stockton, who left their room for dinner Friday night, came back to find $150 stolen from the purse of Mrs. Stallone.

Bonnie Bonanno of Carmichael lost her $1,500 mink coat Friday evening after a Pine Inn waiter hung it in the lobby coat closet.

Two youths were arrested April 22 in Pacific Grove in connection with strong-arm purse snatching attempts in Carmel and Carmel Center Shopping Center.

Paul Donner Jr., 20, of Carmel and Steve Smallwood, 20, of Carmel Valley were stopped on Forest Avenue, Pacific Grove, by police who were acting on a license number tip given them by one of four purse-snatching victims.

Nancy Wiesendanger, of Carmel, Mrs. James von Loben Sells of Carmel, Judith William of Los Altos and Mrs. Martha Scharpf of Beaverton, Oregon were all victims of attempted thefts.

Mrs. Van Loben Sells' purse, stolen from her car seat as she sat parked in front of the Carmel Post Office, was found in the youths' car, according to police.

Judith William of Los Altos was walking by the Post Office with her mother and father when someone grabbed for her purse but caught her arm instead. William's arm was released and she was uninjured.

Martha J. Scharpf of Oregon was crossing Ocean Avenue at San Carlos when another purse-snatch attempt was avoided, no injuries occurred.

Wiesendanger was walking in the parking lot of Carmel Center when someone reached out of a passing minibus, grabbed her purse and pulled her down.

Willard Patton, owner of the Carmel Inn, reported that $175 in cash was taken from the inn's cash box Tuesday night, and a $50 fire extinguisher is missing. Patton told police entry to the box was obtained through the use of a hidden key.

News Briefs

WOMEN'S WEEK

Events ranging from breadmaking demonstrations to discussions on health issues and the legal rights of women are scheduled for the observance of "Women's Week" May 3-7 on the Monterey Peninsula College campus. Programs will be held daily from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the College Center. In addition to the specific events, "Women's Week" will focus on ongoing programs at the college that are of particular interest to women. These include the Women's Re-Entry Program, courses offered under Women's Studies and a Women's Center located on the campus. More information on the events may be obtained through the Public Information Office at MPC, phone 649-1150.

BICENTENNIAL BEARD CONTEST

The Monterey Peninsula Bicentennial Beard Growing Contest will be held July 4 at the Custom House Plaza. A surprise gift will be given for the most insufficient beard and Monterey Mayor Peter Coniglio will present the first prize contest winner with a $100 check. Beards of all types are welcomed and encouraged to enter the contest. Deadline for entries is July 1. Entry forms and further information may be obtained at Mr. C's Hairstyling in Monterey.

CORRECTION

In the April 15, 1976 issue of the Pine Cone the birth date of Christopher Blake Watkins was incorrectly listed as March 3 (p. 26). The correct date is April 3.

Laguna Seca races Saturday

The Monterey Triple Crown May 1-2 at Laguna Seca Raceway will feature Carson Baird, Gene Felton, Amos Johnson and Nick Crow in the B.F. Goodrich Radial Challenge Series race. A dark horse favorite will be Sports Car Club of America Northern Pacific Division 1975 B Sedan Champion Rob McFarlin, Los Altos, Cal., in a new Datsun 710 prepared by F.A.R. Performance of Mountain View.

After the first two B.F.G. races of 1976 at Daytona and Sebring, Baird, driving a Colt, leads the International Motor Sport Association (IMSA) Racing Stock (RS) Driver's Championship with 30 points. He was third in the 1975 Final Standings. 1976 Sebring B.F.G. victor Felton, in an American Motors Corp. (AMC) Gremlin is second with 20 points.

AMC cars have dominated the B.F.G. Series since its 1971 beginning. Amos Johnson, AMC Gremlin, is the leader in the IMSA RS all-time standings with 331 points, at the end of 1975. In 1974 and 1975 at Laguna Seca Raceway, AMC Gremlins led at the finish of the B.F.G. races. For 1976 Johnson, Dennis Shaw and Hurely Haywood will be in AMC Pacers.

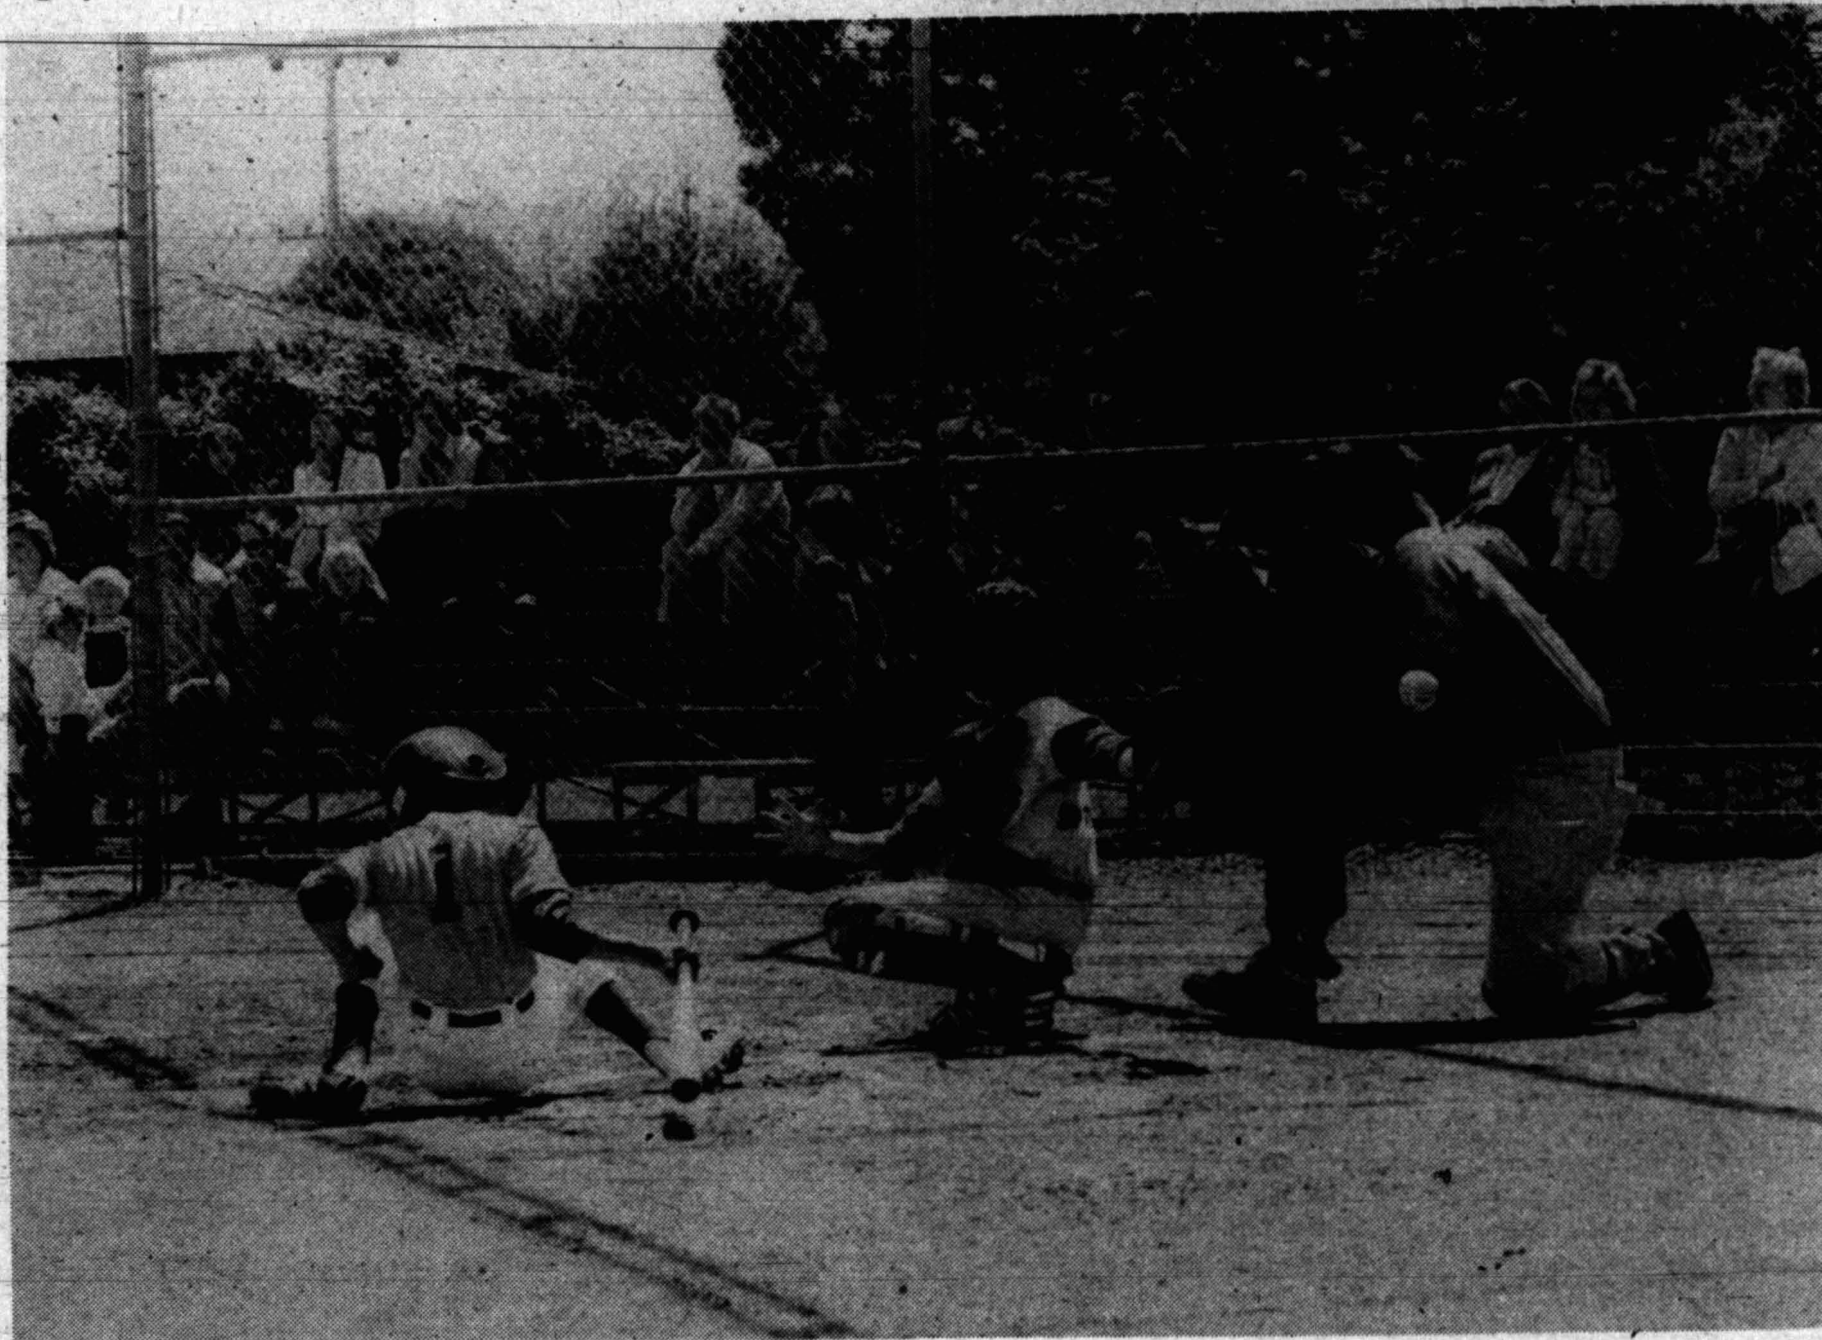

Nick Crow is the 1975 IMSA RS Driver's Champion and is second in the IMSA RS all-time standings. His BMW 2002 is the only BMW regularly entered in B.F.G. races.

The BFG Radial Challenge Series is the only road racing series in the world in which American cars have been predominant. For the last five years, since the series began in 1971, the series has been the showcase for the economy oriented sub-compact cars. The series has given American car manufacturers the opportunity to test their cars against the European and Japanese makes with whom they compete in the open market. In particular, AMC has been able to make numerous improvements to the Gremlins and Hornets from racing knowledge.

By comparison with the highly modified IMSA Camel

GT cars, BFG Radial Challenge cars are virtually street vehicles. IMSA's chief John Bishop has seen that the rules, carefully written to keep price down and competition up, are strictly enforced. In addition to safety harnesses and a roll cage, fuel cells, fire extinguishing systems and various other safety oriented things are required. Major modifications are limited to removing interior items that are either hazardous or flammable, fitting of different suspension springs and sway bars, carburation may be adjusted within limits set by engine size and the exhaust can be straight through. The engine may be balanced and blueprinted, but little more is allowed to be done.

LITTLE LEAGUE ACTION opened with a flourish Saturday. Kelly Childs (above right) wears braided hair underneath her traditional cap. She is a member of the Mediterranean Market team. Carmel Sport Shop team member P.J. Marto sits down after he misses a ball which then bounced out of Pine Inn catcher Brian Nance's glove and ultimately hits the chest pad of umpire Kevin Hugel. ### MONTEREY PINE BARK BEETLE CONTROL

Control of the Monterey Pine Bark Beetle is fairly simple. This particular beetle causes wide destruction and is a major contributor to the rapid death of healthy Monterey Pines in this area. The beetle measures one third inch in length and is red to reddish brown in color. Contrary to popular belief, the Monterey Pine Bark Beetle cannot be controlled by a simple spray application to the trunk. Physically removing the insect pest is essential before control can be assured. Following removal of the insect pest, spraying the trunk of the infested tree will provide protection from additional infestations.

WHERE THE BEETLE ATTACKS

Bark Beetles attack the Monterey Pine at the base of the trunk and to a height of approximately six feet. Any surface roots that are exposed are susceptible to attack as well. On rare occasions, the Bark Beetle has been known to infest the tree at heights greater than six feet.

INDICATIONS OF BEETLE INFESTATION

Positive examination of a Monterey Pine for signs of infestation will reveal whitish or reddish pitch granules lodged in the crevices of the bark or on the ground at the base of the tree. If you find granules, examine the bark surface at or near the granular deposit, or directly above a deposit to locate the insects' entrance hole. The entrance hole will either be surrounded by reddish pitch forming a small cone, or the hole will be completely covered with a mass of gummy residue. Such tell-tale signs indicate that Bark Beetles are active.

HOW DAMAGE IS CAUSED

The insect pest tunnels through the tree's thick bark plates, into the cambium and sometimes into the sapwood. As the beetle bores, liquid sap is transformed into crystals or sap gum and ejected from the tunnel. These are the crystal residue deposits seen in the bark crevices or on the ground. There is no particular direction or pattern to the tunneling operation; the beetle simply tunnels. Usually the tunnel is between six and ten inches in length. At the end of the tunnel is the nuptial chamber where the female deposits most of her eggs. Eggs are also attached to the walls of the tunnel. Following hatching, the larvae feeds on the tree's cambium layer forming numerous galleries in the process. The insect's cycle can repeat itself every 180 days within the same tree if left unchecked. Thus, several generations can be present.

Uncontrolled, the insect pest can cause a rapid dieback of a healthy host tree. Eventually, death will result due to the girdling of the tree's life supporting cambium layer. A concentrated attack can cause death within several months.

HOW TO ERRADICATE THE INSECT FROM THE HOST TREE

Find the entrance hole or holes of the insects, mark them for repair, and gather the following tools:

1. Wooden mallet or hammer
2. 1/2" chisel and a 1" chisel
3. Small wisk broom
4. Tree seal compound and paint brush for application.

Starting at the entrance hole, begin chipping away small pieces of the bark around the entrance hole. Avoid removing too much bark at any one time. Do not lose site of the tunnel. Trace the bark as you follow the beetle's tunnel, making certain that all damaged cambium is exposed. The tunnel will be your guide as you continue tracing. Remove 1-1 1/2 inches of healthy bark and cambium from either side of the infested tunnel. Gradual and cautious removal of bark and cambium will serve two purposes:

1. Damage to healthy bark and cambium will be minimized.
2. The insect causing the destruction can be captured — this will eliminate any guess work and assure destruction of the insect.

The most important part of tracing is to find the insect or insects. (there have been as many as six mature beetles in one gallery). When you have reached the nuptial chamber, trace beyond it (1-1 1/2 inches) to make certain that other tunnels do not extend beyond the chamber.

Once you are certain that all the beetles have been removed, trim the damaged areas by smoothing the edges of the chiseled area. Making the edges even and smooth will reduce future possibilities of decay and stimulate rapid callus growth. Shape the entire wound into an oval with pointed ends. The oval shape and the pointed ends will also stimulate rapid callus growth and will allow easy runoff of surface water. The oval shape cannot always be maintained because of the erratic direction that Bark Beetles often take when tunneling. In this situation, shape the wound as well as you can, and form points wherever the edge of the wound changes direction.

After the wound is shaped and the edges have been made smooth, clean the exposed wood of all dirt and foreign debris with a small wisk broom. Follow this procedure with the application of a tree seal compound. Spread the seal so that all of the wound is covered with 1/8" to 1/2" of material. Overlap the seal so that the edges of the undamaged bark and cambium are sealed as well.

After applying the seal compound to all repaired areas, spray the exposed roots and the trunk from ground level to a height of six feet. Linden 200 or Chloridane insecticides are commonly recommended. Examine the tree every so often to make certain that there are no further infestations.

UF screening applicants

United Fund executive director Gil Funston announced that the Monterey Peninsula organization is now accepting applications from local charitable agencies that desire to be recipients of the Fund's annual contribution drive.

Funston said that such applications, included with a copy of the agency's detailed annual budget, must be sent to the United Fund office no later than May 15, 1976.

The UF Admissions

Committee, headed by chairman Clay Larson, will meet soon thereafter to review the applications and interview representatives of the applying agencies. Applicants will be notified of their time of appearance and the meeting location.

For further information and applications, all interested parties should contact the UF office, 807 Cass Street, Monterey. Their telephone number is 372-8026.

New Carmel Businesses

Sam and Selene Ehrenberg met each other several years ago in Los Angeles while working for the same company. Two years later, they were married. The Ehrenbergs started collecting graphic art and studying prints and printmaking with the intent of someday opening a gallery. Three years ago they decided to open a gallery in Carmel. Their collection grew faster than expected, and soon they had enough art to hold collectors parties in their home. These gatherings helped them to gain experience in the art world and also slowly earn the capital to eventually open their business.

The Atelier Galerie in Del Dono Court on 5th and Dolores is the beginning of their plans. Their collection numbers some 120 fine original prints. The showcase they built for these graphics exquisitely compliments the art. They designed the gallery to their own taste so the pictures can be appreciated to their fullest extent.

Framing is an important part of the total image. Each print is framed to show the picture to its best advantage and to fully protect it.

In addition to original prints they will also carry ceramic art by Rosalie Wolf. Mrs. Wolf's background is as a painter, sculptress, and interior decorator. She has combined all three talents into her ceramics and finds this her most rewarding medium.

The Ehrenbergs hope to be able to serve the art community by always showing fine works of art, and helping young artists show their work.

JAXON'S A WELCOME RETURN

Jack and Ginny Jaxon are familiar names here in Carmel. Jack, for many years, was a local artist and gallery owner while Ginny taught mosaic and had a mosaic studio. So when they decided to open their shop, Jaxon's, in the old Casa Dolores Gallery location on Dolores between Ocean and 7th, it was greeted as a welcome return by many in Carmel.

March 6 was the opening date, though as Jack is quick to point out, a lot of his more unusual merchandise hasn't arrived yet. But there is enough in to see that those who enjoyed the Jaxon's style in the past will find browsing in their shop just as rewarding. Better quality costume jewelry is featured, some of which, although classified as "costume", are lovelier than many higher priced items.

Other items carried are specialty gift items, sand paintings, porcelains from Italy, Spain and Mexico and metal sculptures. The Jaxons consider their "As You Like Its" the most interesting item in the shop so far. "As You Like Its" are geometric shapes of light gauge steel in both gold and silver tones. They can be stacked in various combinations to build your own centerpieces and candle holders or whatever you can envision for them. They are moderately priced from $9.00, and could make a perfect Mother's Day gift.

Varsity beats faculty

In a special benefit game played last Friday between the Carmel Padre varsity basketball team and a team made up of CHS faculty members, the varsity won by an overwhelming score of 65-38.

The varsity had two players in double figures, Bill Colohan and Dan Sturges, both juniors and both returning to the squad next season. The faculty had but one player in double figures, assistant principal Paul "Flash" Sheckler, who had 10 points for the faculty team.

The game started off on a relatively even keel, with the score only 12-10 in favor of the varsity after the first quarter. After wholesale substitutions by both teams, the varsity edged ahead at the half 25-17, and from then on it was straight downhill for the faculty team, with the varsity ahead 43-24 at the end of the third quarter and the final score 65-38.

The gate receipts benefited the Basketball Club, which is raising money for tournament trip expenses next season.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS

Separate sealed bids will be received by the Board of Trustees of the Carmel Unified School District for furnishing and installing Relocatable Classrooms at the Carmel High School, Carmel, California. Bids will be received at the Office of the Superintendent of Schools, at the Central Office, at the Carmel Middle School Site, Carmel Valley Road, Carmel, California until May 14, 1976 at 2:00 p.m. and then at said office opened and read aloud.

Bids shall be presented on a form to be obtained from the office of Fred Keeble and George Rhoda, Architects, 135 Webster Street, Monterey, California.

The Information for Bidders, Form of Bid, Form of Contract, Plans and Specifications may be examined and/or obtained in the office of Fred Keeble and George Rhoda, Architects, located at 135 Webster Street, Monterey, California.

The Owner reserves the right to waive any informalities and to reject any or all bids.

Each bid must be accompanied by cash, certified check of the Bidder, or a bid bond duly executed by the Bidder as principal and having as surety thereon a surety company approved by the Owner in the amount of ten percent (10%) of the bid.

The successful bidder shall be required to furnish a labor and material bond in the amount equal to fifty percent (50%) of the Contract price and a faithful performance bond in an amount equal to one hundred percent (100%) of the Contract price, said bonds to be secured from a surety company satisfactory to the Board of Trustees of the Carmel Unified School District.

Attention of bidders is particularly called to the requirement as to conditions of employment to be observed and minimum wage rate to be paid under the Contract. Minimum wage rates, as ascertained from the Secretary of Labor, currently prevailing in Monterey County, California, are required to be paid workmen, mechanics, and laborers employed directly upon the site of the work.

No bidder may withdraw his bid within thirty (30) days after the actual date of the opening thereof.

Carmel Valley

If you are looking for comfort and quality in a home; if you love peace, serenity, the warmth and light of the sun and lovely, expansive views, then we suggest that you come and see this new home in Carmel Valley.

It sits nestled in and above the oaks on a beautiful 1.07 acre site on a crest of Chapareal road at Arboleda Lane, overlooking the Holman ranch to the east and down the valley to the sea from the west.

The numbers read 3 bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, a family room, etc. etc. in 2,700 sq. ft. of living space, coupled with a 3 car garage and much, much more.

Give us a call if you have any questions and then come and see the home and feel the area. We know it will be well worth your while. $139,500.

Near The Pine Inn, A Delightful Surprise

Near all the good things of Carmel — the picturesque shops, the library, the theaters, and just up the street from the sea. Also, just a few blocks to the Carmel gate to Pebble Beach. And what are the delightful surprises?

1. It's architecture is contemporary in style, but the building materials are rustic, as you like them.
2. It was built in 1969 by the present owner.
3. It has four (4) bedrooms and a balcony overlooking the living room which could also be used for guest accommodations.
4. The kitchen is modern, convenient, easy care, with lots of cupboards.
5. The master bedroom is adjacent to the balcony loft, which means a full suite, or an ideal studio of home office, with water view.
6. Used brick fireplace for enjoyment in either living or dining room.
7. Living room has oak plank floors, beam ceiling, lots of windows.
8. There's a 21' x 21' deck off the living room.

This is a fine home for a family weekender, for two or three couples to share, or for full-time living for a busy couple. Especially ideal for Carmel shopkeepers or office owners who want to live close to the Village. Immediate occupancy, so you can begin to enjoy The Carmel Experience the minute the escrow closes.

Price, $108,500.

P.S. HAVE YOU SEEN OUR DARLING LITTLE HOUSE FOR JUST $67,500? CALL TO SEE IF IT IS STILL AVAILABLE.
